MAC-BLO GRABS DOMTAR SHARES

Forest Giant Power Struggle

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., in a major corporate struggle to avoid takeover by Domtar Inc, announced today it has bought 20 per cent of Domtar's outstanding common shares and intends to gain full control of the Montreal-based company.

The move followed a bid by Domtar on Thursday to take over MacMillan Bloedel, the Vancouver-based forest giant.

The takeover battle sets up a confrontation between two of Canada's corporate giants and may create one of the world's largest forest products companies.

The Domtar shares are being purchased from Argus Corp. Ltd. and Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd.

As well, the Vancouver company said it will make an immediate offer of $28 a share to Domtar shareholders.

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. owns the largest block of Macmillan Bloedel stock, 13.4 per cent of the 21.2 million common shares, while Argus Corp. of Toronto has effective control of Domtar, holding 16.9 per cent of 14.8 million common shares.

Stuart Kerr, Domtar's vice-president of administration, said Thursday that MacMillan shareholders were to be be offered one Domtar share plus $3 for each common share of MacMillan stock.

In 1977, MacMillan Bloedel reported total revenue of $1.7 billion, compared with Domtar's $1 billion.

MacMillan Bloedel interests in logging, newsprint, and lumber are concentrated principally in British Columbia, although it also has holdings in New Brunswick and the United States.

About two-thirds of Domtar's revenues are derived from pulp and fine paper production in Eastern Canada, with the remainder coming from chemicals and building materials.

MacMillan Bloedel said in a statement it started discussions with Argus about 10 days ago "after a careful analysis of the benefits to shareholders which would accrue from a majority holding of Domtar."

"We intend to pursue vigorously the acquisition of Domtar shares," said company president Calvert Knudsen.

"The result will be to strengthen the national presence of our company and continue its momentum as the leader in the Canadian forest products industry."

With the announcement, trading of Domtar and MacMillan Bloedel shares was halted on Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges. Outstanding common Domtar

Mac-Blo B.C.'s Biggest

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. employs about 16,500 in B.C. and is the province's largest company.

Domtar, the other corporate giant engaged in the current take-over battle, is not as big a company, has little activity in B.C. and although engaged in the production and sale of pulp and paper is more diversified than Mac-Blo.

On Vancouver Island, Mac-Blo operates lumber mills at Chemainus, Harmac and Port Alberni; manufactures newsprint at Port Alberni, kraft at Port Alberni and Harmac and linerboard and shingles at Port Alberni.

The company also has logging operations at Shawnigan Lake, Chemainus, Northwest Bay, Port Alberni, Campbell River, Sayward and Port McNeill.

Mac-Blo manufactures about 1.6 billion feet of lumber a year, rolls out 1.15 million tons of newsprint and other papers and produces about 538,000 tons of kraft pulp in its world operations.

The company's sales for the nine months ending Sept. 30 were $1.5 billion, a record for that three-quarter period. Profit to Sept. 30 reached $73 million, amost doubling the 1977 nine-month total.

Domtar employs about 18,000 in all its operations compared to 24,000 for MacBlo.

Domtar is also diversified into roofing and paving materials, gypsum and lime products, treatment of timber with creosote and chemical manufacture.

Its B.C. operations, all in the Vancouver area, include a construction materials plant, as well as arborite and fine papers divisions.

The company has plants in other parts of Canada, the U.S., and Britain.

Girl Age 4 Beaten Up

Esquimalt police today said they are puzzled by a bizarre attack on a 4½-year-old girl early Thursday morning.

The incident has led to a 21-year-old man being charged with attempted murder.

Kenneth Andrew Burgess, of 1180 Colville, appeared in provincial court Thursday afternoon and was remanded in custody.

Police said the girl, Elizabeth Marie MacBon, is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Police said she was beaten on the head and neck in the bedroom of a suite in the 1180 Colville apartment block occupied by her mother, Brenda MacBon.

Police said an unsuccessful attempt was made to enter the mother's bedroom.

Police arrested the suspect minutes after the incident, which occurred at about 3 a.m.

Police said Mrs. MacBon had left the front door of the apartment unlocked to allow a girlfriend to come in.

Ontario Lawyers Miffed

Canadian Press

A number of Ontario lawyers expressed disappointment Thursday at the appointment of a British Columbia judge to the Supreme Court of Canada in place of an Ontario judge—a break with a 100-year-old tradition.

William Rogers McIntyre, 60, of the British Columbia Court of Appeals was appointed by the federal government to fill the vacancy opening on the court with the Dec. 29 resignation of Mr. Justice Wishart Spence, one of the traditional trio of Ontario representatives

W. H. Kidd, president of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association, said he had expected the traditional pattern of appointments to be followed.

By law, only Quebec is guaranteed three Supreme Court members. Ontario, however, always has had three members, the Atlantic regions one and Western Canada two.

Toronto lawyer Morris Manning said he was disappointed at the break in tradition "just because B.C. wants a spot on the court."

He said three Ontario judges "makes good sense, considering the population and the number of cases from Ontario that go before the Supreme Court."

Toronto lawyer Douglas Laidlaw, however, suggested that any appointment should be based on merit "and forget all about regional representation."

"This appointment was entirely political and I don't like it," he said.

In an August paper on constitutional reform then-justice minister Otto Lang referred to objections from British Columbia that the informal system of appointing Supreme Court justices resulted in no judge on the court from B.C. since 1962.

Barring unforeseen circumstances, said Lang, this normally would mean B.C. could not have a court member until the retirement of either Mr. Justice Ronald Martland (Alberta) or Mr. Justice Brian Dickson (Manitoba).

2ND FLQ PAIR HEADING HOME?

MONTREAL (CP) — Radio station CKAC says Jacques Lanctot and Marc Carbonneau, members of a terrorist cell accused of kidnapping British diplomat James Cross in 1970, are preparing to return to Montreal from exile in Paris.

Lanctot plans to return late in January and Carbonneau several weeks later, the radio station said, adding that the two former members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec have revealed their plans only to members of their families here.

Lanctot is the brother of Louise Cossette-Trudel, who returned last week from Paris with her husband Jacques and their two children. The Cossette-Trudels were arraigned in connection with the kidnapping and face preliminary hearings next Wednesday.

Members of the FLQ cell were allowed safe passage from Montreal to Cuba in 1970 in exchange for Cross's release, and left for Paris four years later.

Union - Gov't Scrap Over Robot Mailman

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. government is experimenting with electronic helpers to do routine chores now performed by civil servants.

The advantage of such "robots," to management is many-fold. They do not call in sick, take vacations, complain or join unions. They work night and day unless unplugged.

The Commerce Department has several delivering mail. But the current hassle comes from the U.S. Labor Department. It has a robot device, 24 inches wide, 58 inches long and 51 inches high. This tan, 700 pound, 3-wheeled machine (cost: $12,860) delivers and picks up mail. It runs on a magnetic track, beeping to tell where it is. At each office stop it chimes upon arrival and departure. It does not climb stairs or do windows.

Some Labor Department workers are not amused. They say it is especially ironic that some of the reports and memos the robot delivers concern the impact of automation on unemployment.

The labor union at the Labor Department (the American Federation of Government Employees) is upset bcause the robot (really a glorified filing cabinet) is doing its thing on the 3rd floor, where once a human being handled the mail cart.

Officials of the AFL-CIO union have protested that the robot was introduced or hired without consultation. While the union's contract with the department doesn't specifically cover negotiations over robots, it does include such items as staffing and job changes.

Labor Department brass say the robot-machine has been well-received generally. They point to a survey where 28 of its customers were polled. The result: 24 said the robot does nice work, 2 offices said it had no opinion and 2 said they preferred a human being.

PILOT'S FAMILY WINS INSURANCE FIGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Great West Life Assurance Co. was ordered Thursday to pay $70,000 to the family of a Kelowna man who died after a plane crash two years ago, even though the victim's insurance policy had an airplane accident exclusion clause.

Justice Samuel Toy ordered the payment to the estate of David Chapman because the pilot was not killed in the accident itself.

Chapman's single-engine plane crashed near Hope Nov. 7, 1975, while on a flight to Kelowna from Vancouver. He left a note at the plane saying he would try walking out, even though he was dressed only in light clothes.

Searchers arrived two days later and began following the tracks when one RCMP officer slipped 30 feet into an icy stream. He would have died if he hadn't been able to chip footholds with a bayonet after his hunting knife broke.

Justice Toy ruled that Chapman likely died in a similar accident, although bits of his clothing were found.

Asbestos Dust Classroom Killer?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — "Millions of children" in public schools may be exposed to cancer-causing asbestos particles in the air of their classrooms, an environmental group charged Thursday.

The Environmental Defence Fund (EDF) said one out of every six schools could have possibly dangerous asbestos coatings.

And public schools are only the tip of the iceberg, the group said. Other public buildings, private schools, public and private universities and office buildings across the country were extensively sprayed with asbestos.

The EDF, an environmental group of 45,000 members, filed a petition with the Environmental Protection Agency demanding that agency identify all public schools where asbestos is a hazard and require asbestos manufacturers to make necessary repairs.

The petition will allow the fund to go to court in 90 days to try to force the government to act.

The National Education Association, the National Parent and Teachers Association and the American Federation of Teachers also called for immediate action.

"Potentially millions of children in thousands of public schools across the country are needlessly being subjected to a cancer risk of unknown magnitude," EDF lawyer Bob Rauch told a press conference Thursday.

"While the full extent of the problem remains unknown, the evidence to date shows that in many schools children are being exposed to levels of asbestos far in excess of those in ambient air and equal to levels associated with an increased risk of cancer."

Children are particularly vulnerable to asbestos effects because they breathe more air and have a longer life span to develop slow-growing cancers, Rauch said.

The most significant hazards occur during routine building maintenance, such as repairing electrical fixtures. When the asbestos is cut, the dust and flakes get into the air and are recycled continually.

Fund scientist Joseph Highland said, "If I were a parent who observed the ceiling flaking, I would keep my children out of school."

The EDF said slightly more than 6,000 of the 87,000-plus public schools across the country have been inspected for asbestos contamination. Of those, close to 1,000 were found to

Cutback in UIC Payments Rushed through House

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberals and New Democrats joined Thursday night to reject a Progressive Conservative proposal to pay more unemployment insurance benefits to married unemployed than to single ones.

The vote on a Conservative amendment to unemployment insurance legislation the government is rushing through Parliament was one of 24 voice or recorded votes conducted in the Commons in about 1½ hours.

The majority of the other votes were on New Democrat amendments that would have had the effect of emasculating the legislation, designed to save the government $1.5 billion over a two-year period.

The Conservatives voted with the government on most of these.

The series of votes cleared the way for third and final reading of the legislation today. It then was to be rushed to the Senate which would begin consideration tonight and may continue after Christmas.

Part of the government restraint program, the legislation will become law Jan. 1.

There was no question but that it would pass the Commons, with the Conservatives and New Democrats opposing the government.

Thre also was no question but that it would pass the Senate, although Conservatives growled Thursday that the government was attempting to ram the legislation through without permitting careful consideration.

Stalling the bill past Jan. 1 would reduce by millions of dollars the amount the government hopes to save by mid-1981.

The legislation would make about 250,000 persons ineligible for benefits, reduce benefits by 10 per cent, tax back benefits from high-income earners and shift some government costs to the private sector.

The bill also authorizes certain regions of the country to be designated as high unemployment areas where restrictions governing payments can be eased.

The Conservatives and the New Democrats say the bill hurts the very people that the program is designed to help, particularly in the Atlantic provinces and Quebec.

The Conservatives propose a two-tier system, paying lower benefits to those without dependents and increasing penalties on those who quit their jobs and collect benefits.

The quitters would lose 12 weeks of benefits instead of the six weeks they now lose and they would get smaller weekly cheques.

The Conservatives said their amendments would result in savings to the government without penalizing the legitimately unemployed, already the worst victims of a troubled economy.

The NDP says the government is punishing the unemployed by cutting benefits at the worst possible time — when more than 900,000 Canadians are already unemployed and the 8.2 per cent jobless rate is going to climb during the winter.

Several government backbenchers have criticized the system used to designate the high-unemployment regions, saying boundaries were arbitrarily determined on the basis of geography. But they did not vote against the government Thursday night.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen has blasted the opposition for taking a hypocritical approach, especially the NDP for trying to delay passage. The NDP amendments were not realitic, he said.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark charged Thursday the government had moved to restrict debate to silence disgrunteld Liberal MPs, not the opposition.

He berated the government for refusing to consider any improvements to the legislation that did not originate on the government side of the Commons.

Silent Night: BBC on Strike

LONDON (UPI) — Most British Broadcasting Corp. radio programs went off the air today while management and unions tried to avert a blackout of all BBC radio and television services during Christmas.

The BBC said it would try to maintain some programming in the event of a wide-scale strike. The broadcast group has never been totally shut down.

Management and the unions were holding last-minute talks this afternoon in an effort to head off the stoppage, which has already knocked both BBC TV channels off the air.

Senior BBC officials said managers would man the studios to ensure Queen Elizabeth's pre-taped traditional Christmas message would go out as scheduled Christmas day.

Hijack Teenage Girl Arrested

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — A 17-year-old girl who hijacked a TWA jetliner with 87 people aboard hoping to force a federal prison to release the man her mother died trying to help escape was in custody of juvenile authorities today.

Robin Oswald of St. Louis commandeered the flight from Louisville to Kansas City, Mo., Thursday, claiming she had three sticks of dynamite strapped across her chest. After her arrest, the FBI said the "dynamite" was actually railroad flares.

She ordered the plane to fly to Marion, the site of the federal prison housing Garreto B. Trapnell, 40, a convicted hijacker. Miss Oswald's mother was shot to death during an attempt to free Trapnell last May.

But during the nearly 10 hours the plane was on the ground in Marion, the hostages managed to escape one-by-one and in small groups.

When she was left alone on the plane, FBI agents boarded it and took her into custody Thursday night.

The FBI said Miss Oswald was trying to carry out the dying wish of her mother, Barbara Oswald, 43, who was shot to death May 24 in a commandeered helicopter while trying to help Trapnell escape from the U.S. pentientiary near Marion.

Robin Oswald was arraigned shortly after her arrest and placed in the custody of juvenile authorities.

Mideast Summit To Follow Talks?

United Press International

Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil arrived in Brussels today for a weekend of American-initiated talks with Israeli Foreign Minister. Moshe Dayan aimed at breaking the stalemated Middle East peace talks. There was talk of a new Camp David-style summit.

Khalil made no statement on his arrival in the Belgian capital but in Cairo, Acting Foreign Minister Butros Ghali said the Brussels talks, which will be hosted by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, on Saturday and Sunday could lead to a new summit resolving differences holding up the Israeli-Egyptian treaty.

Asked whether the Brussels talks might produce agreement on a Summit along the lines of the September Camp David meeting, which resulted in a peace framework pact, Ghali said, "This may be a possibility."

But Ghali said there will be no treaty unless Israel also signs what he described as a "complementary treaty" in the form of an exchange of identical letters establishing a link, complete with a time frame, between the bilateral settlement and establishment of Palestinian autonomy in the Jordan West Bank and Gaza. Israel has rejected such linkage.

Ghali briefed members of the Foreign Press Association just after Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil flew to Brussels for talks with Dayan and Vance on ways of reviving negotiations stalled since mid-November over the Palestinian link and other issues.

Troops Club Students

TEHRAN (UPI) — Army troops used jeeps and clubs to scatter several hundred students and professors demonstrating in front of Tehran University today. Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi worked to find politicians willing to join a new civilian government.

University professors said several persons were injured when club-swinging troops drove their jeeps into a crowd of students and teachers outside the university's administration building.

"The students and professors had gather outside to show their solidarity with those of us inside," said one professor among more than 100 staging a sit-in at the adminstration building.

"All were asking is that the university be open to students," the professor said.

At the royal palace, teenagers staged a pro-shah demonstration under the approving gaze of military troops.

Victoria Times

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1978

GORDON BELL, Managing Editor | COLIN McCULLOUGH, Publisher | BARBARA McLINTOCK, Editor

The Times Have Changed

The long-awaited report from the attorney-general's department on illegal break-ins by the RCMP effectively exonerates the force of any wrongdoing in some 41 "improperly authorized" entries. Government officials who prepared the report have attempted to bend over backwards in explaining away police indiscretions and over-eagerness.

We are told by deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel that circumstances during the years 1972 to 1976, when the illegal break-ins took place, were very different from today. There was an incredible rise in the crime rate across Canada; people felt afraid to go out on their own streets for all the criminals lying in wait.

Between 1972 and 1976, Vogel says, "there was a totally different attitude [among the public] toward policing responsibilities" and thus the RCMP in British Columbia felt free to burgle various premises to install wiretaps illegally and to gather incriminating evidence, secure that the public backed them in their belief that the end justified the means, any means.

Similar reasoning has been offered up to the McDonald royal commission investigating RCMP abuses: Quebec in the early 1970s was in a virtual state of war against terrorists and separatists, and the police felt justified in sometimes acting outside the law. The end justified the means.

Was the public that scared? Does anyone remember going in fear of his life beyond his doorstep a few short years ago? Certainly at official levels in both Canada and the United States, people in positions of power and responsibility must have quaked in fear. Those years are just coming into focus now at a time when the authorities seemed to lose their nerve in the face of widespread unrest. Things appeared to be coming apart and nobody had any rational explanation. The incredible scale of student demonstrations against the Vietnam war in the U.S., like the agitation for independence in Quebec and university unrest in Europe, suggested to many politicians and police — screamed at them — that communists or anarchists or bomb-throwers had to be at the bottom of it. (Richard Nixon's plumbers were ordered to break into the offices of the Democratic party in hopes of finding evidence that Fidel Castro was financing presidential candidate George McGovern, according to one theory on Watergate.)

Was this a justified conclusion? Most people under 30, who grew up during those tumultous times, laugh at the idea. They wanted changes in society, and hundreds of thousands of them marched in protest for this cause or that issue — but to suggest that secret armies were being raised to seize power violently? That is ludicrous.

This may seem rather far from 41 illegal break-ins in British Columbia, but the deputy attorney-general made the connection, not us. The times justified — demanded — the police move quickly (if illegally) at times, he said. In the meantime, people's basic rights were trampled.

Dropping all consideration of criminal charges against those over-zealous police who committed illegal acts may be the only prudent expedient available — but only if there are assurances that the same thing cannot happen again, when the police and politicians perceive the times to have changed again. We cannot have confidence in them if they ignore basic, democratic rights at every whim or shift in public opinion polls.

Thanks, Santa

B.C. got a Christmas present from the federal government's Santa on Thursday — a B.C. judge appointed to the Supreme Court of Canada plus new chief justices for both the B.C. Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal.

All three appointments must be considered excellent choices.

The great surprise in the appointment of former appeals court judge W.R. McIntyre to the Supreme Court of Canada is not that McIntyre was the one named but that any B.C. judge at all received the position. Traditionally, western Canada has only two representatives on the nine-member court, and neither of the existing two westerners is expected to retire until at least 1982.

To give B.C. a judge, the federal government decided to reduce Ontario's representation by one, leaving only two Ontario judges and bringing the western contingent up to three. Premier Bill Bennett has long been complaining that B.C. has not had a judge on the Supreme Court of Canada bench for 16 years, and it is pleasant to see that his arguments have finally been heeded.

McIntyre personally is considered a good choice for the job. In his years on the B.C. appeals bench, he has developed a reputation as a fine jurist with an excellent legal mind.

The government should also be commended for its choice of chief justices. Nathan Nemetz, chief justice of the Supreme Court for the past several years, has well proven himself able to handle the job from both a judicial and an administrative viewpoint. He will doubtless bring to the appeal court the same thoroughness, wit and common sense that he brought to his former position.

Alan McEachern, the new chief justice of the B.C. Supreme Court, has not previously been a member of the bench, but he has won widespread respect from the legal profession. As senior partner in the huge Vancouver law firm of Russell and DuMoulin, he has acted as counsel in some of the biggest cases in recent B.C. legal history.

As well, he has gained a reputation as a practical, down-to-earth man, traits that will undoubtedly stand him in good stead as he takes on administration of the court.

For all three appointments, thanks, Santa. We can't think of anybody we'd have liked more.

TOM WICKER

Sitting in Middle of Trouble

GABARONE, Botswana — It was a scene familiar in the West but rare in Africa. The bewigged speaker of the House rapped his gavel, the 32 members settled into their seats, and the fifth session of the freely elected parliament of the Republic of Botswana made ready to hear the opening speech by President Sir Seretse Khama.

The public galleries were filled and ambassadors from the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Britain were on hand as Seretse opened with a reminder to the assembled politicians that the nation's fourth round of free elections (in its 12 years of independence) soon would be held.

That meant, the president pointed out, "that even in an area characterized by political tyranny and racial autocracy, such as southern Africa, a truly democratic society can be created and maintained; it can take root and flourish."

Black and White

This produced a rumble from backbenchers, apparently a raucous lot in the British tradition. And well it might have, since Botswana, a nation the size of Texas but with three times as many cattle as people, is one of only two practising democracies on this continent. (The other is Gambia).

Listening was Seretse's cabinet, in which the minister of public works and communications is a white man and the minister of mineral affairs, water and energy is a black woman. Under his wig, the speaker also was white, and four of the 32 seats were filled by members of opposition parties.

All this attested not just to democracy, but to a non-racial society as well, and one in which the rule of law — upheld by an independent judiciary — has been well-established. There are no political prisoners in Botswana, corruption is conspicuous by its absence and the economy is organized on free enterprise principles.

In fact, about the only reminder of customs in all too many other African states was the presence of the president's young son; Ian Khama, in the uniform of a brigadier-general of the Botswana defence force.

But if in all these ways Botswana seems to be the state department's dream of the ideal African nation — democratic, capitalist and non-militarist — it is also a country in considerable trouble, with lots more just waiting to happen.

Economically, the nation depends largely on mineral wealth, mostly diamonds, and its traditional cattle industry (Botswana annually sells 17.5 million tons of its excellent beef in Europe). All this is fine for foreign exchange but neither diamond mining nor cattle raising is labor-intensive and Botswana's major economic problem is to provide income-producing jobs for most of its 750,000 people, only about 30 per cent of whom are literate.

"Our major task during this second decade of our independence," Seretse told parliament, was not just to educate young Botswana (as they are called), but to find jobs for them. Since public sector wealth already is providing primary and secondary schools throughout the country, even in the remote west, the second part of that task will be by far the most difficult.

Even greater potential difficulties are posed for Botswana because of its landlocked location and its borders with three crisis areas — Rhodesia, South Africa and Namibia. And only the narrow "Caprivi Strip," a relic of colonial border arrangements, separates it from Angola.

Already, about 17,000 refugees from Rhodesia are in camps in Botswana. Sources here confirm that when Rhodesian males of fighting age cross the border, they are disarmed and sent on as soon as possible to Rhodesian nationalist camps in Zambia. No offensive operations against Rhodesia are permitted.

Sent on to Zambia

Even so, the danger of Rhodesian attacks on the camps in Botswana is ever present. In the altogether likely event of a civil war between black nationalist groups in that country, fighting forces would almost surely spill over into weak Botswana's largely undefended border areas.

That could disrupt or destroy Botswana's lifeline, the single railway running through the eastern part of the country from South Africa into Rhodesia. Alternatively, South Africa could cut that lifeline at any time, and probably would if it were to suffer economic sanctions imposed by the outside world. No wonder Seretse told parliament that in "this troubled region . . . there is every indication that the worst is still to come."

Animal Control

The shooting of a pet dog while with its owner in Thetis Lake Park has happened in other areas and will continue to as long as there are gun-happy hunters and dog-hating citizens. This is not referring to animals running in packs and killing livestock.

Animal control and pet protection laws are incompetent at the municipal level, ignored at the non-essential regional level and have been dropped at the provincial level through the department of agriculture, which not only phased out animal control officers (replacing them with RCMP officers, who do not like to consider themselves "dog catchers" and act accordingly) but passed on responsibility to regional boards.

The politicians and bureaucratic assistants should get off their butts and formulate a clear bill of rights for animals and a standardized animal control program; the leniency of animal cruelty fines is just one of the disgraceful aspects of all those connected with law enforcement today, which is not based on guilt or innocence but weasel word technicalities.

Unfortunately, no updated program will come from the present provincial government, where animal control responsibility begins. As animals can't vote, I would suggest that all pet owners and persons concerned with wildlife and ecology remember this at the next provincial election. — Maggi Lynn, 548 Niagara Street.

What benefits has Atlantic City derived from legal gambling? Not much.

Glitter and Gold

No, this is not a comment on Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities.

Viewers who may have watched Weekend on television on Dec. 9 know that the two cities are Miami, Fla. and Atlantic City, N.J.

Voters rejected gambling casinos in Miami Beach, in spite of very strong lobbies from various interested parties. And the city has become a more and more family-oriented resort and a haven for retired people who enjoy the sunny beaches and the majestic view of the ocean.

Atlantic City's dwellers were promised more jobs, more affluence, and believed these promises.

Senior citizens were enticed to vote for legalized gambling because it would have provided them with better care, better housing, above all, the restoration of old homes and decadent apartment buildings. In many instances all they got was notice to vacate their premises, as the area where they had been living for many years was rezoned for new hotels, parking lots and additional gambling establishments.

As for jobs, practically all went to outsiders, mostly from Las Vegas and Reno, because of their casino experience.

Far from bringing prosperity, in spite of all the glitter and gold, the city has suffered from an increase in crime to which we may add the suffering of the old and the poor with nowhere to go!

This story of two cities is outside of our boundaries and, so far, not within our experience.

But, if we are not alert, well-informed and conscious of what's happening, we may find ourselves facing the problems of Atlantic City, if the once-renovated Crystal Garden becomes the beginning of a gambling adventure probably ending in disaster.

We have already quite a few lotteries where neither westerners or easterners are all-ways "winners." The winners are provincial and federal governments which "devote" lottery funds to programs of their own choice.

Are we never going to smarten up? — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Give Early

Re: donations (tax deductible) to national political parties:

Last year you kindly gave publicity to the merits and advantages of making donations to political parties which (on the federal level) would qualify for a deduction from personal income tax. I write now to ask if you could, once again, give publicity to the fact, and to the imminence of the deadline for donations which will qualify for the 1978 tax year: such donations must be received by the political party by the calendar year end.

One final point: cheques must be made payable to the exact name as indicated below — e.g.: for the Progressive Conservatives, make the cheque payable to P.C. Canada Fund.

The name and addresses of the political parties are as follows:

For the Conservatives: P.C. Canada Fund, 96 East Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5T 1V6.

For the Liberals: The Fund for the Liberal Party, 201-1894 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V6J 1Y9.

For the New Democratic Party: New Democratic Party of Canada, 517 East Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5T 1X4.

With a federal election just around the corner, it is particularly important that the parties have sufficient financial resources to fulfill their roles effectively; your help in encouraging Canadians to contribute will be much appreciated by all parties, I'm sure.— Michael C. Manning, C-1558 Beach Drive.

Get Some Advice

Allen Houghton and the Shah Jahan restaurant deserve credit for sponsoring a Middle East Spectacular at the McPherson playhouse on Dec. 16. However, it is unfortunate that with the notable exception of Vancouver's Kamallia, the organization and performance resembled that of a junior grade school production, on a bad night.

The local manager, M.C. and dancer, Riaz, apparently suffered from a sprained ankle and was unable to perform; it is unfortunate that he also didn't have laryngitis. Promotional advertisements billing this show as a "Company of 20 World Famous Performers" including "Victoria's Own International Bellydancing Team" were misleading. The art of Oriental dancing should not be judged on the basis of this performance as there are obviously better dancers, even locally in Victoria. If Riaz and company do intend "to present another spectacular in a few months," may I suggest they arrange for some professional advice in both dancing and the consequences of misleading advertisement. — M. Miles, Victoria.

Saanich in Debt

Saanich taxpayers are continually being told by council members that the "line is being held" on taxes and the mill rate is not increasing. What they omit to say is that recent councils have borrowed heavily to achieve this and the "hold the line" policy is only apparent.

Saanich has borrowed approximately $5 million in the last four years (according to statements made by the mayor and senior staff at a public information meeting in Cordova Bay recently). The present municipal debt is $18 million.

At $18 million Saanich has the highest municipal debt in the region and one of the highest debt rates in the province. (As of December, 1977 Victoria's debt was approximately $10 millon, Oak Bay's $4 million, Esquimalt's $1 million).

The 1977 and 1978 chairmen of the finance committee have both made recent statements in the press that during their period in office the mill rate did not increase. They intimated that the reason for this was careful budgeting. In view of the above facts I find these statements misleading and irresponsible.

Economists have warned Saanich that the demand for expanded services caused by rapid development could cause serious financial problems, and that great care should be taken to keep control of the mill-rate. By dipping into the pockets of money-lenders there is a danger that neither officials nor taxpayers know what the "real mill rate" is.

I hope that the new council, and in particular the new chairman of the finance committee, will be more accurate and forthright about the true state of municipal finances. — Ann Moffat, 5447 Fowler Road.

Twist, Twist, Twist

The policy of your editorial staff seems to be to twist any statement by any corporate body or government department to a negative and self-derogatory statement. Your writers always try to find something to turn the readers against the real truth contained in the news.

For instance, the second front page of the Times Dec. 13 had the headline: Hydro Turning Off Hot Water. They are not turning off any water; your statement is a lie.

A truer and more positive headline could have read: B.C. Hydro Saves Capital Costs. Shedding electricity load by fitting timer switches or other devices to cut off water heaters during times of peak load was used in Sweden over 50 years ago and is now used generally throughout the world. — Walter White, 302-1440 Beach Drive.

The Baggy Greens

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Inch by inch, cadet by cadet, the baggy green outfit of the Armed Forces, like water seeking its own level, engulfs the last vestiges of Canada's traditional military uniforms. The Department of National Defence has spent $8 million producing 65,000 green safari suits for Canada's sea, army and air cadets, and barring a few shortages in sizes and types, it has doled them all out. The cadets — the last major group to wear the styles of uniform worn before unification of the services in 1969 — are stuck with bush-style jackets, slacks and shoes.

It is, as retired naval Lieutenant-Commander J. R. Lamb lamented recently, the final attack on esprit de corps in Canada's fighting units, a homegenizing agent introduced by bureaucrats "determined to keep everyone in the same drab green dress, designed deliberatly to be as un-martial as possible, and preferably with a little plastic name tag attached so as to look like a service station attendant."

To instil a sense of pride in a unit, the men in that unit must be given "a group identity they can relate to, an identity that is enduring, something that is greater than merely the sum total of a collection of fallible, fearful men." Instead, "our services have become the playground of the political theorist and the bureaucrat, and tend to be motivated by the civil service mentality . . . They stamp out enthusiasm wherever it shows itself."

Not fortunately, all the enthusiasm. The Naval officers Association of Canada still pays for navy-blue uniforms for the military bands at Stadacona and Naden. Private enthusiasts underwrite the cost of at least nine different uniforms to save them from the jolly green hand of the Defence Department. And opponents of unification like Lt.-Cdr. Lamb continue to call for a repudiation of the green jumpers and a return to a system which gives its members a sense of identity.

In 1976, former defence minister James Richardson promised to defer any change in the naval cadet uniform for at least 18 months to two years to permit a full discussion of the question. Two years later, the government has heard all it cares to, and is steamrolling ahead as planned. The style of uniform which saw action in the Second World War is, says current Defence Minister Barnett Danson, "out of date."

The peacetime civil service has taken over. Everyone into a safari suit, and bring a name tag.

Stalin Ghost Hangs Over Russia

By DAVID K. SHIPLER
New York Times

MOSCOW — An old veteran moved furtively along the swaying corridors of an overnight train bound for Moscow. At each compartment he stopped briefly, holding something in a cupped hand, clandestinely offering it for sale. The price: a ruble. The illicit merchandise: small homemade 1979 calendars, each page bearing an heroic photograph of Stalin.

A quarter of a century has passed since the dictator's death, and Soviet society is still possessed by his legacy, still unresolved in its judgment of his brutal regime, still infected by a profound ambivalence about him that festers beneath many of the emotions and political attitudes governing contemporary life.

Code word

Although Stalin's crimes were denounced by Nikita Khrushchev in 1956, they are ignored today in classrooms and dismissed in history texts as mere mistakes. Although his name was removed 20 years ago from cities and streets and mountain peaks, it is now, for Russians, a code word akin to law and order in the United States, but connoting something far more mystical and deeply frightening.

Hardly ever prounounced in public, the terms Stalin and Stalinism are not the tools of open debate, existing instead in an underworld of political moods and instincts. For Russians who feel more comfortable under iron rule — and there are many — his name evokes a passion for order and efficiency and orthodoxy that they miss in the country today. For others it triggers a dread of the oppressive reflexes that are part of the Soviet heritage.

"Stalin is not dead," a Moscow writer remarked. "Stalin today is less dead than he was 20 years ago."

Though the mass terror of the Stalinist period is gone, of course, the governmental, police and social structures that he imposed are basically intact, apparently immune to reform. Amid the silence of official history, Russians are left to read great significance into the most subtle shifts in the treatment of the memory of the man whose whims controlled Soviet destiny from the mid-1920's.

Just a passing mention of his name in a speech is enough to stir a smattering of applause, and then a spate of excited, worried speculation about what it means. His portrayal in feature films about the Second World War — always as a solid leader performing with wisdom and dignity — is scrutinized for clues to the party's evolving views and policies. A Muscovite remarked with fascination and disgust, "I am seeing Stalin's face on television more and more."

Even when the Central committee of the Soviet Communist Party rejected an attempt last year to rehabilitate one of Stalin's most famous purge victims, Nikolai I. Bukharin, a colleague of Lenin and a member of the party Politburo, the action was viewed as much more than an historical curiosity. It was widely interpreted as a coded affirmation of the legitimacy of the show trials of the 1930's, a refusal to reverse their verdicts and, in essence, a repudiation of liberalization today.

The Bukharin issue is being kept alive by several Communist parties in Western Europe that have criticized the Kremlin for violations of human rights and are highly sensitive to any efforts toward resurrecting Stalin's memory.

The next test of such an effort will come in December 1979, the 100th anniversary of Stalin's birth in Gori in what is now Soviet Georgia. Private commemorations by individual admirers are already in evidence, including the homemade calendars sold on trains and at stations, with 1879-1979 emblazoned beneath portraits. The question is whether the political leadership will permit and organize official observance of the centenary.

Cancelled

In a forthcoming book, Roy Medvedev, the dissident Socialist and author of Let History Judge, a highly respected work on Stalinism, has written about abortive preparations to rehabilitate the dictator on the 90th anniversary of his birth. "In the Institute of Marxism-Leninism," he writes, "a special session was planned, dedicated to the memory of Stalin." The Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, prepared a major editorial, he says, and a printer was ordered to make up a large official portrait, while art studios began to produce busts and a publication of writings was made ready.

After strong protests by the Polish and Hungarian parties, Medvedev writes, the Soviet Politburo voted by a small majority to cancel the observance, although the article and portrait — distributed in advance to foreign parties — appeared in a Mongolian paper because of a slipup in communications.

A certain tense interest surrounds such activity partly because official history, so unambiguous and dogmatic on most themes, has an equivocal view of Stalin. It is so delicately drawn that even the principal of a school in Minsk, a history teacher and party member himself, was afraid to discuss it with an American correspondent. He repeatedly evaded questions about how the Stalin record is taught now and finally, exasperated, suggested a reading of the standard textbook.

There the dictator is presented as a true Marxist-Leninist, the legitimate heir of Lenin. He was guilty of fostering "a cult of personality" and he made a few "mistakes" — a euphemistic allusion to the terror and the purges — but the laws from his time are good laws, the history says, and his brilliance in leading the nation to victory in the Second World War is unquestioned.

Left unmentioned is Lenin's letter of warning, first reported in the Khrushchev secret speech of 1956, that Stalin should not be trusted as his successor. Ignored is the decimation of the officer ranks of the military before the war. Omitted is Stalin's attempted appeasement of Hitler.

All this is what Lev Kopelev, a writer and a veteran of Stalin's prison camps, calls the official myth, the first of four contemporary myths he has identified that tap strong currents of admiration for the dictator. The second he labels the popular myth, a set of images, widely believed, picturing Stalin as a just statesman and military genius who ruled with a hard hand but who maintained order — a vivid contrast with the seeming disorderliness of 1978, when corruption and inefficiency abound, when dissidents and defilers of the motherland run loose.

Kopelev's third myth is a localized set of admiring emotions centering on Stalin's ethnic origins as one of the Georgians, a people with an ancient and proud culture whose small territory in the Caucasus forms one of the 15 Soviet republics. Many Georgians revere Stalin as a symbol of their national pride, and his picture can be seen more often in his native region than anywhere else. The director of a state farm outside Tbilisi, the Georgian capital, pours wine for two American journalists, then toasts Stalin. An engineer often lifts his glass to the dictator in long eulogies although both his parents perished in Stalin's concentration camps.

Hushed up

The final myth about Stalin, which is embraced by ethnic Russian nationalists, argues, in Kopelev's words, "that in spite of his Georgian origins he was a good general in the Russian state, that he built up the Russian state, that he was a good Russian statesman."

Common to much of Stalin's latent popularity is a widespread perception of the present leadership as weak and irresolute. "When Stalin had something to say," a young linguist remarked admiringly, "the whole country hushed up. What is he saying? Shhh. Now when Brezhnev says something, there is just a weary sigh: 'Oh, he is at it again.' "

Many well-educated Russians regard such attitudes toward the leaders as symptomatic of the society's ideological emptiness, loss of momentum and absence of heroes.

"We were Stalinists," a Muscovite said of himself and his wife, who is still a party member. "Our ideals were quite rational. We wanted to be a Communist country, a Communist world — happiness for all humanity, freedom for all humanity. We used barbarous means, but for a great number of us they were means for a good end. Now people have no official ideology. Now the leadership of today is very unpopular. Nobody knows them as individuals. They have no image. Social ideals are almost dead."

Another man, somewhat younger, explained the affection for Stalin in another way: "It is not nostalgia. It is something a little different. It is a junction between positive recollections of the past and decline of belief in the future. Under Stalin talent and daring could advance your career. You could shoot up quickly. It was clear that if you violated the rules you were through. Now, different policies exist for different people and at different times."

To many, the country seems to have stagnated into layers of elitism and special privilege in which the hopes for a bright new society, once so fervent, have flickered and died. "We are ruled," Kopelev declared, "not by a Communist party or by a fascist party and not by a Stalinist party, but by a status quo party."

Furthermore, the absence of a strong authority figure leaves many Russians with an overwhelming sense of emptiness, a vestige of the loss felt so sharply when Khrushchev exposed and denounced a ruler whom the people had been taught to worship. The condemnation came as a shock, shaking loose the underpinnings of an entire system of faith.

"There are people who even now cannot forgiive Khrushchev for what he did in '56," a young university student observed. "Even people who agreed with Khrushchev were angry with him," another added. Other students objected, and an intense argument exploded in the small living room of the Moscow apartment where they had gathered. The debate evolved into a struggle between one young man, nostalgic for Stalin's firm hand, and all the rest, who deplored the imprisonment and executions without trial, the fear, the paranoia.

At the end a student nodded toward the defender of Stalin and said to a friend, "I thought I knew him before but I did not."

In American terminology, the "popular myth" about Stalin might be called the hard-hat view, in which resentments over rising prices, constant shortages, shoddy merchandise, artistic and literary unorthodoxy and dissidence find expression in an idealization of Stalin's rule.

"Under Stalin," a young man grumbled as he picked over a market of nearly needle-less New Year trees last winter, "these people would be imprisoned for selling such things." Another Russian, pointing to a construction site, said: "See that building? It has been under construction for 11 years. See this one? Stalin built it in four years."

Expelled

The myth of supreme efficiency is bolstered by the official war films, both fictional and documentary, which show Stalin, briefly, as a steady military commander of great wisdom. In scenes with other Allied leaders he is contrasted dramatically with Roosevelt and Churchill, who are often portrayed as scheming and waspish. No accurate account of Stalin's military blundering is permitted. In 1967, for example, a historian named Aleksandr Nekrich, who is now living in the West, was expelled from the party after writing a book on Soviet unpreparedness for the German invasion in 1941.

The concealment of history had produced a generation of youth who know less about their own country's dark past than Westerners know. "Some people think that maybe 100 or 200 died," said a foreign affairs specialist in his twenties whose father is a ranking party member. "Others think tens of thousands. People cannot understand that Stalin annihilated more than perished in World War II."

"The young do not know anything, do not read anything," he continued. "They want order, they want eveything to be good, and so we have only a superficial liberalization. My father is very much afraid of a return to Stalinism."

Ignorance

Others see in young people's ignorance an ironic openness, a willingness to mix with foreigners, to speak their minds, to see the limits of behavior as broader, more distant, than do those who knew fear under Stalin.

An elderly scientist and his wife remember how courageous a small gesture could be in those days. Once, at a concert, they chanced to sit between two groups of Americans. After each number the Americans leaned across the Russian couple to converse. During intermission friends warned the scientists that it looked, from several rows back, as if they had come to the theatre with the Americans and were talking with them — a dangerous act in Stalin's time — so they should go home at once. The scientist and his wife considered for a moment, then, summoning a spirit of defiance, decided to stay. Nothing happened.

Young Russians would find such a story laughable, for so much has changed. Friendship with Americans no longer results in prison terms, except in cases of overt political dissent. Close relations with foreigners are deterred more subtly since they place in jeopardy trips abroad, job promotions and acceptance into the Communist Party. This is enough to make people wary but it is far short of terror.

"We are sitting here now and talking," an engineer remarked, "and we will decide it is not for the last time. Under Stalin you could not say that."

Visitor to Stalin Museum at Gori, in Soviet republic of Georgia, ascends stairs to statue of late leader. Above it is written: "As far as I am concerned, I am just a student of Lenin and my goal is to be a worthy disciple of his."

Clanking in the Attic

russell baker

There are many kinds of ghosts. I dislike them all and fear some. There is one who comes to my bedroom in the darkest pit of night. Absolutely silent he is, but I can feel him moving through the room. Sometimes he stands directly beside the bed, making a cold spot in the darkness.

Although I have never seen him, I know he has a peg leg and is immensely evil. I believe he once kidnapped cats for unspeakable purposes by night, and worked for the government by day. He is not one of your amusing Victorian ghosts, you may be sure. I have it from a chain-clanking ghost that the Victorian ghosts are quite decent and never make cold spots when they move through a dark room.

Chain-clanking ghosts are one of the three most common varieties. Others are ghosts who keen on windy nights (known among ghostologists as "howling Alices") and ghosts who carry dim lamps through abandoned houses on moonless nights. The latter are all female in appearance, although, in fact, being ghosts, they have no sex.

Chain-clankers always appear to be male. We once had a house in a hair-raising section of Manhattan which had a chain-clanker in the attic. I disliked him intensely. What was peculiarly odious about him was his nasty refusal ever to be visible to anyone but me.

As a result, my insistence that we had a chain-clanker in the attic confirmed my family's belief that I had a bat in my belfry.

One night I noticed a dim lamp moving from window to window in the abandoned brownstone across the street. It was, of course, a dim-lamp-bearing ghost. Closer inspection revealed that the apparition was, as usual, female in form, but of a beauty quite beyond that of dim-lamp-bearers normally seen in abandoned houses.

Inside among the cobwebs she was ready enough to tell me what a lovely ectoplasm like her was doing in a place like that. Years ago her lover, a man far below her station, had been ordered out of the house by her father with instructions never to return until he had made his fortune. She had promised to wait for him with a dim lamp in the window every Christmas Eve.

And so he had disappeared into the world. Over the years she had caught sketchy rumors that he was busy night and day kidnapping cats and working for the government.

"Wait no more, my lady," I told her. "Your beloved is nigh." It was a simple matter to arrange for her to welcome the tenant of my attic at midnight, but rather more difficult to kidnap six cats and haul them up to the attic before the appointed hour.

Being an unprincipled swine like most chain-clankers, he fancied the idea, but had misgivings. After all, he pointed out, as a ghost, he was not really a man and the dim-light-bearer was not really a woman, and since neither really had any sex, the adventure seemed pointless.

"My good chain-clanker, this is New York," I explained. "If trifles like that don't bother the living, surely they need not deter the dead." And rubbing him with tax money until he smelled of government, I watched him vanish through the wall and across the street.

The joyous bells of Christmas had scarcely stopped their racket when out on the street there arose such a clatter that I sprang from my bed to see what was afoot. It was the six cats I had given the chain-clanker. He had turned them loose on a midnight caller, who obviously had a bad reputation among cats, for they immediately proceeded to run off with his leg.

Despite this handicap, the caller cried that he had come back for his love after many a year. In reply she dropped a dim lamp and 50 pounds of chains from the window to his head, and he hopped off to a peg-leg discount house shrieking promises of vengeance.

We moved from the house with the attic shortly afterwards because of a sudden onset of loathsome odors and pots of boiling oil falling unaccountably from the chandeliers. My family takes this as evidence that flying saucers will come for them some Christmas Eve soon now.

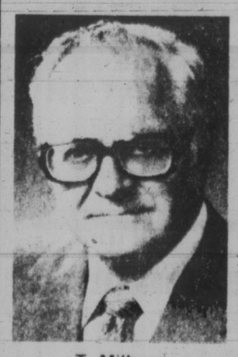
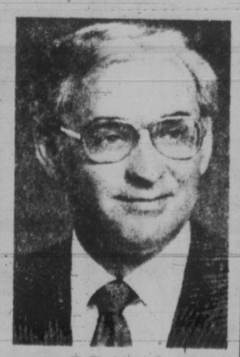
CANADA SAFEWAY ANNOUNCEMENT



T. Milburn



R.F. Hendy

Mr. Anselmo, President of Canada Safeway Limited, announces the retirement of Mr. T. Milburn, Vice-President and Division Manager, Canada Safeway Limited, effective on December 31, 1978. Mr. Milburn will continue as a Director of the Company.

Mr. Tom Milburn, born in Nelson, B.C., started his career in that city in 1937. He later became Store Manager in Kelowna in 1940, and Advertising Manager in the Vancouver Office in 1941. He subsequently became Interior District Manager in 1953, Retail Operations Manager in 1962 and Zone Manager in 1965. In 1972 he was promoted to Division Manager in charge of the Company's operations in British Columbia, the position he has since held, culminating in 41 years of service.

Mr. Robert F. Hendy, born in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, joined Canada Safeway Limited in Prince Albert in 1950. He later became a Store Manager, Employee Relations and Advertising Manager in the Saskatoon Zone. In 1964 he was transferred to Scotland and while there was promoted to Zone Manager of the Scotland operation. In 1968 he returned to Canada as Zone Manager of the Saskatoon Zone, and in 1972 he was promoted to Manager of the Regina Zone. In 1977 he was loaned to the Company's Division in Seattle as Retail Operations Manager and has now returned to Canada to take up the position of Division Manager of the Vancouver Division as of January 1, 1979.

Firestone

Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., the second-largest U.S. tire-maker, said it lost $127.2 million in the quarter ended Oct. 31. It said the loss was due to a recall of its Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires.

Firestone, which is considering a $1.35-billion merger with auto parts-maker Borg-Warner Corp., said the loss for the quarter came after it took a pre-tax write-off for the recall totalling $234 million.

The write-off is equal to $147.4 million after taxes, Firestone said. A write-off is an action charging an asset's value to an expense or loss account.

Firestone said were it not for the recall and for the phasing out of some facilities, it would have earned $20.2 million, or 35 cents a share, down from $25.3 million, or 44 cents a share, in the corresponding 1977 quarter.

Its sales for the 1978 quarter totalled $1.37 billion, up from $1.21 billion.

Firestone ranks second in the U.S. industry to Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

Bombardier

Bombardier Inc. reports a profit for the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1978, of $6,098,000, or $1.57 a share, a recovery from a loss of $2,665,000 for the same period last year.

Sales for the third quarter of this year amounted to $116,508,000, compared with $82,834,000 in the third quarter of 1977. The company also notes its consolidated net sales for the first three quarters have increased to $254,282,000 from $164,806,000 for the first three quarters of last year.

AT&T

American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (A.T. and T.) said its earnings for the quarter ended Nov. 30 rose by about 18 per cent over those of a year before.

A.T.and T. said it earned $1.36 billion, or $1.97 a share, against $1.15 billion, or $1.74 a share in the comparable quarter of 1977. Revenues rose to $10.56 billion from $9.41 billion.

For the 12 months ended Nov. 30, A.T. and T. said it earned $5.24 billion, or $7.71 a share, up from $1.41 billion, or $6.78 a share, a year earlier. Its revenues for the 12 months totaled $40.7 billion, up from $36.05 billion.

A.T. and T. is the most widely held company in the U.S., with nearly 3 million shareholders. It provides nearly 80 per cent of the telephones in the United States.

Moffat

Moffat Communications Ltd. of Winnipeg reports its net income for the year ended Aug. 31 topped $3 million, compared to about $2.8 million for the previous year.

Moffat has extensive radio and television holdings in Western Canada.

The company's annual report said dividends to shareholders increased 31.9 per cent to $762,000 dollars.

Moffat's Winnipeg holdings include Winnipeg Videon Ltd., CKY-TV, CKY-AM and CITI-FM.

'79 Refugee Quota to Triple

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will accept 5,000 Indochinese refugees next year, tripling the current monthly rate of receiving people from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

Immigration Minister Bud Cullen and External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson also announced today the government will double its contribution to the United Nations High Commission for Refugees to $2 million from $1 million.

The government decision follows an appeal by the UN high commissioner for refugees in Geneva two weeks ago for urgent help to relieve refugee pressure on southeast Asian countries such as Malaysia and Thailand.

The flow of refugees from Vietnam alone has risen to about 15,000 a month recently from about 3,000 monthly in September. Malaysia which is already caring for 40,000 refugees, has been trying to discourage Vietnamese from entering the country.

Malaysia recently refused to allow 2,500 Vietnamese refugees aboard the freighter Hai Hong to land. Canada agreed to accept 604 of the Vietnamese and other countries also helped.

The government has also been allowing up to 70 Indochinese families a month to enter. That now has been stepped up to about 200 families monthly.

Canada accepted 548 refugees in 1977 and the 1978 figure is expected to be about 1,200.

The United States has doubled its intake of Indochinese refugees to 50,000 for 1979 and Australia has promised to take 10,500.

An immigration department spokesman said the Canadian decision to accept more Indochinese will probably mean the over-all refugee quota for 1979 will be increased. The 1979 quota is 6,000.

The government has said Cnada will continue to accept refugees from Latin America next year and will increase efforts in Europe.

Immigration department officers in Southeast Asia will be shifted around to handle the heavy refugee flow from Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam, he said.

Cullen said offers of public assistance poured in for the Hai Hong refugees and the department will need more of that during 1979. Groups offered help in finding housing and jobs for refugees and welcomed them.

The provinces are being informed of the increased federal refugee program, an immigration department spokesman said.

1,100 JUMP TO ASYLUM

KUALA TRENGGANU, Malaysia (Reuter) — About 1,100 Vietnamese refugees were rescued after jumping into choppy seas from three boats today in an attempt to gain temporary asylum in Malaysia, a Trengganu state government spokesman said.

The spokesman said the refugees, many of them women and children, were brought ashore by police and home guards.

The three boats were among five vessels which had tried to come ashore Thursday but were turned back by security units, he said.

The Malaysian government, frustrated by an unending influx of Vietnamese refugees, has branded them as illegal immigrants.

The refugee population in Malaysia now stands at more than 48,000.

10,000 New Jobs New Year's Gift To Seattle Area

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. has announced a New Year's present for Puget Sound area residents: an estimated 10,000 new jobs.

The company said Thursday the 15 per cent boost in employment will increase its area work force to about 75,000. The company added about 12,000 employees this year, for a nationwide and overseas work force of 86,000.

Boeing said the work force projections are subject to revision.

Most of the employment increase is owing to the company's commercial airplane programs, the company said. About half the new jobs will be created by the new 757 and 767 airliners recently announced, with the remainder coming from increased production of 727 and 737 planes, as well as the 747 jumbo jets.

Boeing has had a record year, with 1978 jet orders of $11 billion.

Current openings exist for skilled employees in the field of design, planning, aircraft assembly, computing, software development and most engineering areas, Boeing said, adding that it already has a surplus of unskilled applicants.

INDIA ARREST TOLL SWELLS

NEW DELHI (AP) — More deaths and injuries were reported today as the arrest toll swelled to more than 32,000 in the continuing wave of riots aimed at getting former prime minister Indira Gandhi freed from jail.

Two persons were killed and five injured when police opened fire on a violent mob of 2,000 protesting against Mrs. Gandhi's jailing, the United News of India reported from the western state of Maharashtra.

The news agency quoted R. Rangaraju, deputy police inspector general, that police resorted to tear-gas and then rifle fire to disperse the rioters in Wardha district, about 576 kilometres northeast of Bombay.

But J. B. Dhote, a member of Mrs. Gandhi's party in the state assembly, claimed that the police gunfire was unjustified and that the death toll was higher.

At least 15 persons have died since Tuesday when the Indian parliament ousted Mrs. Gandhi from its ranks and jailed her for the rest of the session, set to end Saturday.

The United News of India said more than 14,000 were seized Thursday and that many of them deliberately courted arrest and climbed unaided into police trucks.

Their idea is to fill the jails and embarrass the government, the same tactic used during India's independence struggle with Britain more than 30 years ago.

The rioters swirled through the streets of Hyderabad, Kanpur, Bombay and Calcutta, leaving government buildings and buses wrecked or burned and some civil servants pummelled by mobs.

Mrs. Gandhi appealed to her supporters from her jail cell 15 kilometres from the New Delhi parliament building to react "calmly and peacefully" to her arrest.

She was jailed on a finding that she blocked a 1975 parliamentary investigation of an auto firm run by her son

Censors Carve Up Pope's Message

WARSAW (AP) — Poland's Roman Catholic weekly refused to print Pope John Paul II's Christmas message to his former diocese because it was censored by communist government authorities, it was reported Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Pope has announced he will travel to Mexico next month to attend the Latin American bishops conference in Puebla, and that his personal envoy will try to mediatethe Argentina-Chile territorial dispute.

A Few Final Words About the 'Big Myths'

By DAVID COTTER

"When it comes to the real cure, nobody who has ever made it here has ever been tempted to go back." — Stanton Peele, "Love and Addiction."

After nearly 11 weeks, you may feel like a marathon runner who is just a few strides away from the finish line.

If I might offer one final suggestion, reconsider that image. You haven't been running a race or an endurance contest. What you've been engaged in is an act of reconstruction. Although the coming 12th week does represent a sort of dotted finish line, it would be a mistake to think that your struggle is over.

From the start, this series has emphasized the need for a realistic approach. This week represents the setting of your foundation's final stone, not the completion of construction.

In general, it might be said that the process of quitting consists of these steps: quitting for one day, one week, three months, one year.

I QUIT! Week 12:

Even after one year smokers have reported scattered flashes when they craved a cigarette. These moments are few and brief, but you should expect to meet them. With a strong foundation and continuous practice, it will grow ever easier to remember to remember. One swift pivot will free you from the stickiest flashback.

You may wish to set your list aside now, having been through it so many times. Do so, if you feel secure. But, first review it one more time and add on these final facts:

- You have now gone 11 weeks or 77 days or 1848 hours or 100,880 minutes without a cigarette.
- If you smoked two packs per day, you've now not smoked 3080 cigarettes and have saved nearly $150.
- If you inhaled each cigarette 20 times then you've not inhaled 61,600 times.
- You've now gone over 6 million seconds without fumbling for a match or nervously tapping your ash.

These facts should mean more to you now than such facts as the following, in our earlier vein:

- When smokers switch to cigarettes lower in nicotine content, almost invariably they smoke more to equal their habitual intake of nicotine.
- Besides the obvious hazardous compounds in cigarette smoke, there are hazards (e.g. nitric oxide) and "suspected contributors" (e.g. ammonia).
- Recent research indicates that the primary cause of lung cancer may actually be radio-active particles from cigarette smoke.

Far from simply quitting cold turkey, you've followed a carefully constructed plan, geared to help you find your own way. Though the starting point is the same for all surviving withdrawal, the particulars of the final solution must be custom-tailored for each. And so, the series was intended as a "personal cure," with personal examples to nudge you into insights that might be useful to you.

In treating quitting as an art and an adventure, you've begun construction of a self-image which will include, in time, a new confidence and lack of anxiety. And in restricting your focus to perfecting this art, you've made it possible for the positive feelings that come with it to generalize.

Substantial pursuits are often frustrating and messy, but if we stay tuned and committed, they can grow into adventures that more than equal the sums of their parts. It's useless to cope because coping pays with cheap dividends. Mastery enrichens us.

Your chance of relapsing are infinitely less if you view the matter this way and not as an exercise in self-denial, or as an act apart from the rest of your life, done for the rest of your life.

Ah, for the rest of your life ... Did your heart skip a beat when you read that? Relax. You've already finished the hard part and soon that same phrase will thrill you.

By the way of farewell, though a few final words about the Big Myths. For on the road to relapse a myth is as good as a mile.

Even if you discard your list, never, never, forget to remember:

- Smoking doesn't relax you. It causes the small blood vessels to shrink and forces the heart to pump harder. The ritual may be soothing to some in the same sense that rocking is soothing to the severely retarded. But, you've outgrown it.
- Smoking doesn't perk you up. While it produces a temporary lift, partly by releasing sugar from the liver, the relief is short-lived and followed by more fatigue.

In a 1973 Toronto study, all of the smoking subjects were characterized by unusual tension and lack of self-discipline. Other traits that appeared were emotional instability and dependence. Remember: Nine out of 10 people interviewed want to kick the habit. Nine out of 10 people know that their thumbs are what they're really smoking. Nine out of 10 simply haven't got around to doing what they want to do. You have. That's cool.

But I'm preaching to the converted. Only four words are in order! Congratulations. You've done it.

YOU WON'T BELIEVE WHAT WE DID TO OUR LOUNGE... EXPERIENCE IT!

Curtain for Bunkers

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The long-running CBS television series All in the Family, which broke new ground in television comedy, will almost certainly go off the air after this season, actress Jean Stapleton said Thursday.

Miss Stapleton, who plays Edith Bunker, announced she does not expect to return for another season.

"Nobody's coming back as far as I know," she said. "It's our last year."

Miss Stapleton said she wants to go on to other projects.

TOP HONORS GO TO 64

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Order of Canada, the country's highest distinction, has been granted to 64 Canadians, Governor-General Jules Leger announced today.

Two Companions of Canada were awarded to Gerard Pelletier, Canadian Ambassador to Paris, and the Rev. Edward W. Scott, Archbishop and Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada.

The governor-general appointed 21 Officers of the Order Canada including Gordon Fairweather, chief commissiomer of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, composer Andre Gagnon, Maclean's magazine editor Peter C. Newman, actor Donald Sutherland and Dr. Maurice Van Vliet, president of the XIth Commonwealth Games Foundation.

Diane Jones Konihowski, pentathlon gold medalist at the Edmonton Games, and swimmer Graham Smith, who won six golds in Edmonton, were among 41 recipients of the Member of the Order of Canada.

The Order was created in 1967 to recognize oustanding achievements and service in a variety of fields of human endeavour.

Critics Pan, Fans Love Maggie

By BRIAN OSTROFF
Canadian Press

MONTREAL — Margaret Trudeau's first movie is not totally without redeeming qualities.

L'Ange Gardien—The Guardian Angel—had its world premiere here Thursday night and the professional film critics emerged damning the comedy.

But of a dozen rank-and-file spectators interviewed, all unreservedly praised the movie and the acting of Prime Minister Trudeau's estranged wife.

Some of the critics' comments: "Thank God I was paid to see that; Terrible, I couldn't believe it, it's disgusting; Most of it was in focus, nice color shots, at least technically it's good; Maggie's range of expressions is limited."

From the theatre audience, composed mostly of middle-aged women, came: "A beautiful comedy, it was easy to understand; Yes, I liked it very much, it's always nice watching somebody you know. But I wonder what Mr. Trudeau will think."

Whatever the experts' opinions, Maggie Trudeau's fans—and those who long to see the prime minister of Canada's wife in compromising positions—are likely to be flocking to the movie.

She plays Annie, a Montrealer on holiday on the French Riviera, where she's kept busy fighting off a swarm of males.

Hard-core voyeurs will have to be content with one brief glimpse of the side of Mrs. Trudeau's torso, a harmless scene or two in bed, and another where a self-styled Zen guru attempts to rape her.

Shirley's Anniversary Toot

LONDON — Singer Shirley Bassey apologized to a London court Thursday for being drunk and disorderly while celebrating her 25th anniversary in show business. The 41-year-old singer, best known for songs such as Hey Big Spender and Goldfinger pleaded guilty at Horseferry magistrates court and was given a conditional discharge for three months. This means she will not be sentenced unless she is brought before the court again within the next three months. Miss Bassey was arrested outside her fashionable Eaton Square home in the early hours of Dec. 7 after police were summoned by neighbors.

DANIA, Fla. - Whacking the ball across the net is a way of life for tennis ace Chris Evert, and marriage isn't likely to change it. Her husband-to-be wields a mean racket in his own right. He's British court star John Lloyd and he'll marry Miss Evert this spring. Chris announced impending nuptials while celebrating her 24th birthday here Thursday.

NEW YORK - It had to happen. After all, there seems to be no vaccine for Saturday night fever, but folks down home may not appreciate its latest victim. They grumbled, but went along when Dolly Parton branched out from "pure country" to a pop music format — but disco? That's the new beat for the once-time country queen who's just brought out a new record album called Dance With Dolly.

SANTA MONICA - Mark Hamill — Luke Skywalker in Star Wars — is getting married. No, not to Princess Leia. Hamill, 27, and 23-year-old Marilou York have taken out a marriage licence. They aren't saying when or where they plan to marry. Miss York, a dental hygienist, recently moved to California from Indiana.

Ottawa's Moving In On Raw Asbestos

Tough new federal government controls are being developed to ban the sale of asbestos in its natural state to consumers in Canada.

Bill White, B.C. manager of the product safety branch of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs said in an interview Thursday the controls could be brought before Parliament by as early as next year for debate and passage into legislation.

White said his staff has been working for several years on new standards for handling asbestos but has been reluctant to proceed too quickly because of the wide range of uses for the mineral and lack of substitutes.

Health authorities have long known asbestos can cause lung diseases including asbestosis and cancer.

The mineral is only dangerous in its powder form when it can be inhalaed.

To this point, White said, most attention has been focused on manufacturers and mines where stringent safety measures have forced companies to take steps to protect workers from the dust.

The government is now turning to providing greater protection for consumers.

White said there are already some prohibitions — notably the ban of asbestos in clothing and modelling clays — but that is only a start.

He said the branch has tried to discourage tradesmen from using the material and has voluntary undertakings from industry to use neither asbestos fibres in drywall plasters nor free asbestos as a simulated ash in artifical fireplaces. But eventually the ban will have be legislated, he said.

Consumers now have unrestricted access to asbestos, White said.

Sheets of the material are sold at building supply firms and there's no onus on dealers to advise the customer of the potential health hazard. There is no requirement in Canada for producers to label compounds containing the mineral.

That is expected to change in the next few years.

"Our aim is ultimately to make it impossible for the consumer to get hold of asbestos," White said.

He said there is no intention to ban the mineral totally because such a move would create chaos.

There is no known subsistute for the blue-and-brown asbestos used to protect underground piping; nor is there any subsitute that can match asbestos's fire resistance quality.

White said the problems encountered in the United States, where high levels of airborne asbestos have been recorded in schools, are not yet apparent in Canada.

Gordon Hewitt, an industrial hygienist with the Worker's Compensation Board said he has never come across an instance in the province where the asbestos level tested higher than the acceptable safety limit.

He said he uses the same testing equipment and standards as in the United States where investigators have found unsafe levels in 1,000 of 6,000 schools tested in 11 states.

Schools Breeding Cancer?

contain asbestos in the air or in sprayed materials.

A New York City school board official, who attended the press conference, said the city has surveyed its 1,000 schools and that asbestos is being found in one-third of them. Two Harlem grade schools have been closed and 300 students transferred to other schools.

However, 25 states have inspected fewer than one per cent of their schools, according to U.S. federal government statistics.

The use of sprayed asbestos as a fireproofing, sound-deadening and decorating material was banned by 1973, but it was used extensively between 1940 and 1973.

In its airborne form, asbestos has been proven carcinogenic, even where exposure lasts only days.

"Greatest concern exists in those cases in which asbestos-containing materials have become visibly damaged. In such cases, levels of asbestos in room air have been found to be as high as 100 times the typical outdoor level," the EDF said.

Liquor Rampage In N.B.

FREDERICTON (CP) — Unfounded rumors that employees of the New Brunswick Liquor Corp. would stage an illegal strike before Christmas touched off mob scenes in some centres Thursday, said J. Albert Landry, chairman of the board of the corporation.

Landry said that before business ended for the day, the corporation had recorded liquor sales of about $500,000 in its stores here and in Moncton.

At one point Thursday, the RCMP cautioned the corporation it could be facing riots. The situation calmed slightly, however, when the union assured there would be no illegal strikes.

But before that happened, liquor stores at the Fredericton mall and nearby Devon Park recorded sales of about $90,000. Another store downtown sold $57,000 worth of liquor before the day ended.

Landry said total sales in Moncton reached $225,000 before the close of business for the day.

Mac-Blo Fights Back At Domtar Takeover

shares were valued at suspension of trading at $24.62, and MacMillan shares at $21.87.

At Thursday's prices, the takeover would be worth $587 million, but because Domtar is offering new treasury shares, its cash outlay would actually be about $64 million for all outstanding shares.

Neither Ian Sinclair, chairman of Canadian Pacific Ltd., nor Argus Corp.'s Conrad Black was available for comment on the affair.

But the offer undoubtedly will have repercussions in Canadian Pacific's head office. About two years ago Sinclair was quoted as saying Canadian Pacific "might take over MacBlo some day, but we have no plans to do so now."

In Ottawa, today, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said today his department is investigating the situation.

He refused comment until the inquiry is complete.

In the Commons, the minister told Toronto New Democrat Bob Rae that combines investigators are looking into the proposed takeover to see whether it would mean undue concentration of market power.

Rae sought a guarantee that the proposed takeover will not mean higher prices for consumers or a loss of jobs in the industry.

He also expressed concern that the recent trend to merge among large corporations such as The Bay and Simpsons could mean skyrocketing prices and increased profits.

Tot Falls 8 Floors To Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 2½-year-old girl fell eight floors to her death from the balcony of a West End apartment building Thursday night.

A police spokesman says the girl's parents were out for the evening and the child was being cared for by a teenaged babysitter.

Full Reports Requested On School Maintenance Woes

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria principals have been asked to prepare detailed reports of maintenance problems in their schools.

Superintendent Allan Stables has requested the submissions in his investigation of an alleged connection between staff layoffs this year and a noticeable drop in maintenance levels.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal said Thursday Stables knows upkeep in schools isn't what it was a year ago.

Stables was in Vancouver today and unavailable for comment.

Stavdal said Stables has heard complaints from parents and principals that staff cutbacks are causing the deterioration.

The board cut 57 non-teaching positions because it felt the district was overstaffed.

The layoffs in January and June affected members of Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) local 382 (custodians and trades people) and local 947 (clerical staff).

The district has increased contracting out this year to cut costs.

Stables was surprised when confronted with a list of specific complaints including rat and termite problems, Stavdal said.

The list was submitted in a letter to the board by the Confederation of Parents Associations of Victoria (CPAV).

CPAV president Marilyn Berry singled out deterioration at Colquitz, termites at McKenzie and a leaky roof at Willows as the most serious problems.

Stavdal said administrators are aware Colquitz is in "shabby condition" and preparations are being made to rectify the situation.

Professional exterminators were at McKenzie on Thursday getting rid of the termites, and tenders have been called for a new roof for Willows, he said.

CUPE Local 382 president Tom Cooper said serious deterioration in schools is the result of continuing cuts to the maintenance budget in recent years.

Cooper, a custodian at George Jay, said the administration knows about the problem but is reluctant to act.

School trustees seldom bother to investigate the effects their cutbacks have on the operation of the schools, Cooper said.

"We had one of the best systems in Canada as far as school maintenance and upkeep of property is concerned," Cooper said.

But deterioration has been steady and in a few years schools will cost the taxpayers a fortune to repair, he said.

He applauded the efforts of the CPAV to confront school officials with the problem.

Maintenance workers have been pointing out the problems for some time with little effect, he said.

Requisitions for repairs sometimes sit around for a couple of years before anything is done, Cooper said.

Willows custodian Bob Cunningham said the leaky roof at the school has been destroying tiles.

Top maintenance and management people have been around to look at the problem three times, but so far nothing has been done. Now the school needs a new roof, he said.

Cunningham said he just keeps putting more buckets on the floor to catch the drips.

First-Class Mail, Via Cobble Hill

So you're wondering why it takes so long for the mail to get across town these days?

Maybe it's because of a unique postal delivery system.

In any case, Mr. and Mrs. M. Mueller of Calgary will get their Christmas card from Mr. and Mrs. Jens Koepke of Edmonton a little late this year.

It ended up in a Cobble Hill mailbox with uncancelled first-class postage and full postal codes attached.

Which leaves one burning question. Which Canadian city are they routing Victoria mail through?

And ask Harold Jackson what he thinks of automated post offices. He'll likely reply, Bah, Humbug!

With good reason considering the state of a Christmas card which was delivered this week to his 101-year-old mother, Sarah Jackson, a resident in the Gorge Hospital.

The card, which was sent by his cousin, Hilda Barnes, of Victoria, arrived looking as if it had been savaged by a wild dog.

The post office had stamped on the envelope — in French and English — that the letter had been damaged by mechanical equipment.

"Never used to have that sort of thing when people did the sorting," mutters Jackson.

Some officers and men of the destroyer HMCS Kootenay will take to the sea on New Year's Day but the period afloat will be brief.

For the second year in a row they'll submerge themselves in a polar bear swim, diving in at 10 a.m. at Willows Park.

Last year 11 brave souls from the ship were joined by one man from CFB Esquimalt for the initial dunking.

This year Sub.-Lt. Bob Marsh of Kootenay says at least 30 of his shipmates intend to take part.

The ship has issued a challenge to all ships of the western command and military units. A trophy will go to the group with the most swimmers.

Not all birds go south for the winter.

Some go east, some go west and some, believe it or not, just go round in circles.

Golden Plovers flutter 2,000 miles across the Pacific to Hawaii from the Aleutian Islands, California gulls, which nest in Saskatchewan, come to the coast (just like prairie farmers) and Sooty Shearwaters leave Australia and New Zealand and fly around in circles in the Pacific.

All of this Town Talk brings to you as a way of saying that birdman Harold Hosford will talk about birds and where they go at 8 p.m. Dec. 28 in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Monday magazine this week got the kind of blanket coverage no publication wants.

Someone dumped what looked like several thousand issues along the Uplands golf course, Cadboro Bay Road and Ring Road at the University of Victoria.

A Monday spokesman said the papers probably came from bulk boxes, none of which are in the university area.

Monday staffers ended up picking up the papers.

"Someone out there is making our life miserable," the spokesman said. "We're just hoping like hell it doesn't happen again."

Saanich municipal engineer Clifford Warren is going to play Santa to Saanich residents — not by giving, but by taking away.

Garbage, that is.

Garbage crews are on their standard winter schedule of a pickup every 14 days, but the Christmas—New Year period's smattering of statutory holidays could mean some residents waiting as much as three weeks between collections.

However, Warren says he's got some money left in his budget so he will ensure residents get a weekly collection over the holiday season.

Former B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson completed the last leg of a 17-day Hawaii-to-Victoria voyage by road when he drove back to Victoria after bringing the yacht Annie Cadby through stormy seas into Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The Annie Cadby, owned by Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm, lost a mast during the Victoria to Maui race last July. Anderson flew to Hawaii last month to skipper the yacht on the return trip.

The crew of four encountered rough weather as soon as they entered Juan de Fuca Strait, and sought shelter in Bamfield.

And All the Best, Sir! Whoever You Are

Even though he chose to advertise the event in the Sidney Review rather than in this newspaper, we would like to extend our warmest congratulations to Lt.-Col. James Brown-Hardinge (Retd.) on his forthcoming marriage to his cousin, Miss Amanda Wentworth, "a woman of excellent quality and parts."

For the benefit of the few readers who may not know the name, we should explain that the colonel is one of the Saanich Peninsula's lovably crusty old curmudgeons — a splendid example of that all-but-extinct breed of officer and gentleman who served King and Country in various far-flung outposts of Empire.

His cantankerous letters to The Review over the years have evoked memories of the glorious days of the British Raj, of big game hunting exploits, of innumerable pink gins served by turbaned bearers under whirring fans or slowly flapping punkahs.

In one of his more memorable letters, which caused a bit of a furore among the peninsula's animal lovers, he suggested a drastic solution to the problem of garden damage caused by roaming deer: digging large pits to catch them, as tigers were once trapped in Poona.

Some churlish people have suggested the colonel is too preposterous to be real; that he is nothing more than a figment of the Review's imagination.

But we (who also believe fervently in the existence of Bigfoot, Nessie, Cadborosaurus and other assorted monsters) incline to the opposite view.

To all doubters we would say, at this festive time of year: Yes, Virginia, there is a Brown-Hardinge (Retd.)

Sharp Drop In Cheats, UIC Claims

Stiffer UIC controls have reduced cheating to almost nil in Victoria, according to a survey by the local Canada Employment Centre.

During the October postal dispute, 7,500 cheques were handed out from the Bay Street Armoury and 365 cheques were unclaimed.

On previous occasions, investigations have shown most of these would have turned out to be people who are in California or Hawaii on holidays and not entitled to UIC benefits.

However, this time only 11 of the 365 people were violating the rules and were cut off from benefits.

"This is a surprisingly low number," said Wally Pickering CEC manager here.

Pickering said it is pleasant to find so much honesty in Victoria, especially at this season when people need money.

The answer may be that more people are aware the UIC control program is becoming increasingly more efficient and therefore it is more difficult to beat the system.

"More employers are filing regular reports and we are checking these through our computer. If there are any discrepancies, we will detect them right away."

Pickering said a postal strike, while inconvenient, provided a good opportunity to monitor the honesty of people making claims.

But in the dispute two months ago, almost all of the 365 who failed to show up for their cheques had good reasons for doing so.

Many explained they expected the strike to end quickly and decided to wait for the mail service to be restored. An investigation showed that these people were entitled to the benefits they were claiming.

Pickering also released figures showing the local economy in November was stronger than at the same time last year.

Only 8,988 Victorians were registered as looking for work, down from 11,000 at the same time last year.

There were 570 people placed in jobs during November, up from 514 the previous November.

In addition, there have been 47 people hired under a federal Tax Credit program and 150 young people hired through Job Experience and Training. Both are subsidized by the federal government.

The local CEC has established the Pacific region's first upgrading course in carpentry through federal funding. About 16 local carpenters are beginning a course at Camosun under the program.

Pavilion Patient Burned

A 63-year-old patient at Memorial Pavilion suffered extensive burns to his body Thursday when ashes from his cigarette ignited his clothing.

James Pattullo is listed in stable condition today in the burns unit of Victoria General Hospital.

A spokesman for the pavilion said Pattullo had asked a nurse if he could smoke and while she was away getting a fireproof smoking blanket he apparently lit up.

When she returned Pattullo was sitting in his wheelchair in the bathroom with his clothing on fire.

Another Gale Causes Outages

Wind gusting to 60 knots thrashed Greater Victoria overnight and caused power outages from Langford to Sooke.

The second windstorm in a week — third big storm this season — brought tree branches down throughout the area.

Broken hydro lines and shorted transformers were reported in parts of Langford and Metchosin and the Sooke-Saseenos district was blacked out for about an hour at midnight.

Some circuits were still being restored this morning.

Ald. Larry Ryan said today the B.C. Forests Products plant on Gorge Road is a fire hazard the city will have to live with.

Ryan said after touring the operation with Chief Eric Simmons this week he is convinced the plant operators are doing everything they can to minimize the hazard.

"Given the nature of the operation, everything that can be done is being done," said Ryan.

He said that sawmills and pulp mills are always hazardous and the only recourse the fire department has is to keep a watchful eye and see that all safety precautions are taken.

"The ultimate solution, which is not practical, is to close it down completely . . . we have to remember there's a lot of jobs at stake here."

Ryan, new chairman of council's fire safety committee, said he is impressed with the state of readiness exhibited by BCFP fire crews.

He also said he believes the company is using the safest technology available.

The Victoria fire department has been called to the Gorge Road plant 18 times this year, but often was there simply as back-up to the BCFP fire suppression crews.

The effects of the National Football League's expansion to a 16-game schedule are written in black and blue on Miami Dolphins.

The Dolphins, as have most other NFL teams, had key players sidelined for various lengths of time this year. As they prepare for their 17th game — Sunday's wild card playoff with Houston Oilers — some key Dolphins are nursing painful limbs.

Among the Miami limping are quarterback Bob Griese (bruised ribs), guard Larry Little (sore knee and ankle) and halfback Delvin Williams (sore knee). Coach Don Shula doesn't consider the injuries serious — just "worrisome."

Griese, the NFL's most accurate passer with a 63-per-cent completion rate, would be replaced by Don Strock if he is unable to start.

The Oilers have their own problems, with quarterback Dan Pastorini and fullback Earl Campbell at less than full strength.

Pastorini, whose injured right knee has kept him off the practice field this week, isn't hurt badly enough to keep him out of Sunday's game.

If Pastorini is unable to play or is injured again on Sunday, the Oilers will be led by Gifford Nielsen, a rookie who played all the way in leading the Oilers to a pre-season victory over Dallas.

In the other wild-card playoff, Philadelphia Eagles visit Atlanta Falcons. The winners advance to their respective conference semi-finals Dec. 30-31.

Gulls' Quick Burst Defeats Oak Bay

Juan de Fuca Gulls fired three quick goals in the dying minutes of the final period Thursday to edge Oak Bay Trios 5-4 at Oak Bay Recreation Centre in the final South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game of the season.

The goals came in the final four minutes of play and boosted Gulls into a tie for third place with Fuller Lake Flyers.

Ian Fraser led Gulls with two goals and singles were added by Mike Adamek, Ross Anderson and Bob Grant. Ken Buna, Rick Schievink, Colin Kinnee and Don Turcotte replied for Trios, who trailed 2-1 after the first period but scored the only goal in the middle frame.

Gary Smith of Oak Bay was the busiest goaltender with 49 saves while Peter Adamek of Juan de Fuca blocked 31 shots.

In the new year, the top four teams and the bottom three will form separate divisions.

Team NHL, the young players representing Canada in the Izvestia Cup, outplayed Sweden to post a 5-2 victory Thursday for their first win in the five-team Moscow hockey tournament.

Three goals in the second period broke open a close game as the Canadians, mostly members of National Hockey League farm clubs, were able to exploit the uncertainty of Swedish goaltending.

At the other end, Swedish native Goran Hogosta played superbly and foiled the Swedish forwards on many of their best attacks.

Bobby Simpson collected three goals for Canada, one in each period.

Lorne Stamler got the other Canadian goals while Leif Holmgren and Joran Lindblom were the scorers for Sweden.

Only five minor penalties were handed out, four to Canada.

The Polish team has won six games and tied two on its Canadian tour.

Stenmark Claims Another Victory

Times News Services

KRANJSKA GORA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Swedish ski superstar Ingemar Stenmark scored his second World Cup triumph within 24 hours at Kranjska Gora, Yugoslavia, winning a men's giant slalom race today ahead of Peter Luescher of Switzerland.

The 22-year-old Swede clocked the fastest times in both heats for a total of 2:28.51.

Luescher finished more than one second behind in 2:29.91 but held on to his leadership in the World Cup over-all standings with a total of 85 points.

Stenmark with three wins in four races trail him in second place with 75 points.

The next World Cup race on the schedule is a downhill at Morzine, France Jan. 6.

Meanwhile, at Cable, Wis., Ove Aunli, a 22-year-old shoe salesman, has upheld his native Norway's rich tradition in cross country skiing, and in the process showed he may be one of the sport's budding giants.

Aunli shrugged off a spill after 13 kilometres on Thursday and went on to a 28-second victory in the men's 15 kilometre race to conclude a two-day Nordic World Cup series.

Alison Owen-Spencer of Anchorage, Alaska, who won the women's five-kilometre World Cup event on Wednesday, won a non-World Cup 10-kilometre event on Thursday in 33:56.

Flames' Style Suits Sabres

By The Canadian Press

The "new" Buffalo Sabres have shown Atlanta Flames that "you can't sit on a lead against a club like Buffalo," says Flames' goalie Dan Bouchard.

The Flames tried to "sit on" their 3-0 first-period lead, and watched Buffalo rebound for a 5-4 National Hockey League victory Thursday night.

The victory put coach Billy Inglis back on the winning track after New York Rangers broke his seven-game unbeaten streak the night before.

Third-period goals by Rick Martin and Don Luce climaxed the Sabres' comeback, and Bob MacMillan scored the game's last goal for the Flames.

"It looked pretty grim when we were down 3-0," said Martin. "You can't quit. You have to get them back one by one."

"We started to take the body in the second period," said Inglis. "I don't why we started then, but we did."

In other NHL games, Boston Bruins beat Colorado Rockies 4-2, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Washington Capitals 5-2, New York Islanders dwned St. Louis Blues 5-1, Montreal Canadiens beat Chicago Black Hawks 5-1 and Pittsburgh Penguins beat Los Angeles Kings 4-1. (Summaries on page 17).

The Sabres fell behind in the first period when Tom Lysiak scored twice in 33 seconds for the Flames. The third Atlanta goal came on a power play by Bobby Lalonde.

"You'll never know how lousy a feeling it is when the momentum changes like it did tonight," said Atlanta coach Fred Creighton.

"The pendulum turned the other way," Bouchard said. "They took the play to us and beat us."

Montreal scored three third-period goals, including two on the same power play, to run its current unbeaten streak to 11. Steve Shutt, Guy Lafleur, Rick Chartraw, Mario Tremblay and Rejean Houle connected for Canadiens.

Bryan Trottier extended his point-scoring streak to 12 games with a goal and two assists. The win was the Islanders' 11th, with four ties, in 15 homes games—the only NHL team unbeaten at home. Garry Unger, playing his 838rd consecutive game, scored the Blues' only goal.

Rick MacLeish and rookie Yves Preston each scored twice to lead Philadelpia to the victory that put the Flyers in second place in the Patrick Division, two points ahead of Atlanta.

Goalie Gerry Cheevers remained undefeated this season with his 11th win in 14 games, and rookie Al Secord scored twice. It was the Bruins fifth consecutive victory and brought their record to 22-5-6.

Ross Lonsberry scored two goals 41 seconds apart in the first period and assisted on another to lead Pittsburgh. The win gave the Penguins a 7-1-4 record in their last 12 games and moved them into a second-place tie with the Kings in the Norris Division. The defeat kept the Kings winless in their last five games.

SANDOWN MEETING SCHEDULED JAN. 5

An earlier meeting to deal with the controversy over Sandown racing dates has been set by the B.C. Racing Commission.

The meeting, originally scheduled for this month and then postponed until Jan. 30, now will be held Jan. 5.

The issue involves a direct confrontation between thoroughbred and standardbred interests.

Cloverdale Raceway, which held a 57-day standardbred meet for the first time at Sandown this year, has asked for 70 days in 1979 between mid-May and mid-September.

On the other hand, the Capital City Turf Club, which brought the thoroughbred racing back to Sandown in 1975, has made an application for dates with two provisos — a two per cent rebate in the government pari-mutuel tax plus an assurance there will be no standardbred dates at Sandown in August or September.

Each side says it cannot carry on unless its requests are met.

Local Golfers Ranked Nationally

OTTAWA — Dawn Coe of Lake Cowichan and Jill Johnson of Ganges are ranked third and fourth, respectively, in the national top 10 junior girls' list for 1978 released recently by the Canadian Ladies Golf Association.

Facilities Please National Rowing Coach

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Elk Lake as a national training site for rowing could become a reality by next spring.

Tudor Bompa of Toronto, Romanian-born coach of Canada's national rowing team, visited Victoria this week and gave the site his stamp of approval.

"The facilities here at Elk Lake appear to be better than Burnaby Lake (where national teams have trained in past)," Bompa said. "There is a broader expanse of water here."

Elk and Beaver lakes have the potential for a 3,500-metre course, 1,500 metres longer than the regulation competitive course at Burnaby. That's important, Bompa explained, for early-season endurance training.

With Victoria's mild climate, he feels there is a good chance that as many as 50 top national rowers could be training here by next March.

"We would also like to bring the national team here to encourage rowing in this part of the country," he added.

The Elk Lake training concept is being pushed by area rowing coaches Al Morrow, Tony Carr and Lief Gotfredsen, Victoria City Rowing Club president John Alexander and John Ellis of Victoria, president of the B.C. Rowing Association.

Canada has 40 carded rowers — proven national and international competitors — and eight of them are from the Victoria area.

They are Ina DeLure, Katie Burke, Kelly Jacklin, Pat Walter, Bruce Ford, Janice Mason, Lisa Roy and Marius Felix. Bompa was scheduled to meet with several of them Tuesday, along with area coaches and officials. The purpose was to outline his training program leading to the 1979 Pan-American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico, in July, the world championships at Bled, Yugoslavia, in August and the Olympics in Moscow in July, 1980.

TUDOR BOMPA
. . . objective: top three

If plans work out as Bompa hopes, training would take place at Elk Lake prior to the Pan-Am Games and again in March, 1980, leading to the Olympics.

"We're relying very heavily on people like Carr, Gotfredsen and Morrow," he explained. "With the addition of Al Morrow to this area (he was appointed UVic rowing coach this year in co-operation with the Canadian Amateur Rowing Association), we're going to be able to develop both international class athletes and also develop specialists in rowing."

The specialists, Bompa explained, would be be competitive rowers graduating to coaching ranks.

Bompa's immediate concern is developing teams for 1979 and 1980. He has an experienced women's team with rowers like DeLure who have been competing since the '76 Olympics in Montreal. It was the women who won Canada's only medals — a silver by Betty Craig of Brockville, Ont., and Susan Antoft of Halifax in coxless pairs and a bronze in the eights — in last month's world championships in New Zealand.

Bompa will be looking over a large crop of young rowers to put together a men's team but feels Canada will do well in the Pan-Am Games.

"Our objective is to put every crew in the top three at San Juan," he said. "Success to me at the world and Olympic level would be to make a final (finishing in the top six)."

Bompa moved to Canada in 1970 and teaches coaching science at York University in Toronto where he has also coached volleyball and track and field. His volleyball teams there have finished second and fourth in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union championships.

He also coached soccer and basketball in Romania and his wife coaches gymnastics in Toronto.

Steelhead are starting to show up in ever-increasing numbers around Vancouver Island — just in time for the traditional opening on Boxing Day.

Anglers fishing for steelhead have to be a hardy breed, braving frozen conditions and often wading through deep snow to reach a favorite pool on the off-chance it will produce one of these fighting sea-run rainbows.

Winter-run steelhead usually enter a river system when it is swollen by floodwaters and the best time to fish is while water levels are dropping.

This can be a short process on rivers which have been logged extensively in the upper reaches or longer on either unlogged or lake-fed rivers.

Terminal gear consists basically of salmon or steelhead roe or paste, worms, Spin 'n' Glo lures, Strawberry spins, spinners and spoons.

And to be successful, you have to bump the gear along the bottom. This boils down to one basic premise: if you aren't losing gear, you're not likely to catch a steelhead.

Unlike most types of fishing, success isn't likely first time out. It usually takes experience and long hours of persistence to catch that first steelie.

The trick is to distinguish between the feel of the bait or lure bumping along the bottom and the light bite of a trophy fish.

Before heading out for the first time, read all the books possible to get an idea of what type of rod, reel and equipment you'd prefer and then, for the first few trips at least, tag along with an expert steelheader or hire a guide.

This might save a lot of time over the trial-and-error approach.

Several rivers on the Island have been producing steelhead for the past month and reports this week indicate "opening day" might be great.

Harris Creek yielded a 13-pounder on Tuesday so either Harris or the San Juan River might be a good bet to start with on Boxing Day.

Confirmed catches to 12 pounds and rumors a of 24-pounder have been reported from the lower reaches of the Cowichan River as far upstream as the River-bottom area.

Nanaimo River is producing a few steelies to 12 pounds and both the Little Qualicum and Big Qualicum might be good this weekend.

A few lunkers to 18 pounds have been landed in the Stamp and Somass Rivers and another good spot to try in the next few days might be the Sarita River.

The Puntledge River, which becomes a catch-and-release proposition between Jan. 1 and May 15, is starting to produce and the Oyster River should contain fish by mid-January.

Perhaps the best steelheading on the Island right now exists in the mid-Island area.

A few steelies in the 18 to 20-pound range have been taken from the Gold River and fair numbers ranging from 12 to 15 pounds were reported from the Campbell and Quinsam Rivers.

Boxing Day Runs

A fun run for all comers will get underway at 12 noon and a sanctioned run for registered athletes is slated for 2 p.m.

Two one-hour runs, a Victoria tradition on Boxing Day for over 10 years, are scheduled Monday at Centennial Stadium.

Further information on the fun run may be obtained by telephoning Derek Ellis at 477-6911 or 477-4366.

UVic track coach Ron Bowker is directing the registered run and may be reached at 477-6911.

AROUND OUR SHORES

A good sail is one of the best cures for too much wining and dining on Christmas Day, so the Turkey Head Sailing Association's annual Boxing Day Rum Race is bound to draw an enthusiastic field of entries.

The race will begin in waters off the Oak Bay Marina at 11 a.m. and will be run on a reverse handicap system with, hopefully, most of the boats going over the finish line around the same time.

To be eligible for the bottles of "Nelson's Blood" and other prizes, skippers must hand over the helm to one of their crew for the duration of the race.

Even if you're not in the mood for sailing a stroll along the waterfront while the race is on could prove almost as beneficial.

Jack Foster's Sherlock is the overall winner of the club's recently completed B series, which is no surprise to those who know the sailing prowess of his wife, Louise. She's been racing since when she was so small you could hardly see her head above the gunwhale of her dinghy. Friends used to say "There goes a boat with a brain in it" as she went over the line in first place.

Runnerup in B series was John Dewey's Shuttlecock, followed, in turn, by Rod McBride's Lemolo, Gerry Porter's Sunshine 12, John Davies' Hazen Castle, Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry, Jill Pugh's Flattery, Ron Lindsey's Carson, Ron Jewula's Beawulf and Doug Taylor-Lee's Helios.

Dinghy sailors of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will take a break during the holiday season, resuming their Saturday afternoon series at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 6.

In spite of Saturday's stormy conditions, these hardy types managed to get in three races in what Jim Allen calls a "survival situation."

Bob Britten and Dave Richardson topped the fleet in the first race. The second time around it was Richardson, followed by Andrew Burton and Chris Anstey. Allen won the third race, followed by Richardson and Doug Taylor-Lee.

The dinghy sailors now have completed their C series. It was won by Allen with Britten and Richardson sharing runnerup honors.

Crews of the club's keel boats had a tough ride Sunday in waters roughened by Saturday's storm when they competed in a 12-miler that completed the club's fall long-distance series.

Jan Huibers' Sea Spell had her rudder bent by a log on the start line but went on to complete the race, ending in fifth place among the division 1 boats. Eric Dowell's Shelca was the winner, edging out Tom Loney's Goodbye, Jack Woodward's Puff II and Fred Gardiner's Tringa for top honors. After Sea Spell came Hugh Porter's Errigal, Bob Hosie's Meg, Jan Olsen's Discretion and R. Smith's Finesse.

Dick Readshaw's Massilia II was the top division II boat. Finishing after her were Bill Hingley's Quintango, Ron Saunders's Irrawaddy, Keijo Kelevi Isomaa's Vandal, Ken Brown's Vahevala, J.A. Robinson's Aratai, Peter Young's Spice, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila, Bob Van Den Driesche's Noosa, J.F. Colwell's Flying Lady, Sandy McMillan's Amber Green and Frank Piddington and Sid Bryant's Knotsure.

Shelca was top division I boat in the series, being followed by Sea Spell, Goodbye, Puff II and Tringa. In division II it was Massilia II, followed by Vandal, Spice, Quintango and Irrawaddy.

Not to be outdone by local sailors, paddling enthusiasts of the Victoria Canoe Club will also have a special sortie on Boxing Day.

This will be the third year they've celebrated Boxing Day by taking a trip down the upper section of the Cowichan River.

Too Old for Air Canada at 29?

OTTAWA (CP) — Too old to start a career as an Air Canada pilot at age 29?

Ian Scott, an Ottawa pilot with six years of commercial flying experience behind him, didn't think so when he applied for a job with the airline last summer.

But when he got a form letter from the Crown corporation advising him there were more suitable applicants in the low- to mid-20 age group, he was no longer sure.

An Air Canada spokesman said the letter could be misconstrued. He insisted that Scott wasn't rejected because of his age but because his technical qualifications weren't as competitive as those of other candidates.

Captain Lyle Greenlaw, a supervisory pilot involved in hiring, agreed the wording "might have been fumbled," but said "we try our damnedest to be fair."

Two department of transport employees based in Toronto have appealed to the human rights commission after receiving similar rejections from Air Canada.

Jim MacKenzie, spokesman for the commission, said discrimination on the basis of age is prohibited.

Said Scott, who now flies geophysical surveyors in a twin-engine turbine: "After investing years and about $8,000 to gain the experience and licences required by Air Canada, it hurts to be told you're too old."

The letter read in part: "Many (applicants) are now in the low-to mid-20 age group and are therefore more suited to second officer roles which they will hold for an extended period of time."

Successful job applicants undergo a three-month training period after which they serve as second officers, Greenlaw said. A second officer did not fly an aircraft; he reads instruments and monitors the various systems.

Scott said he is waiting for the outcome of the two Toronto appeals before approaching the commission.

PONDERING letter from Air Canada and wondering if 29 really is over the hill is pilot Ian Scott of Ottawa.

CRASH AWARD

EDMONTON (CP) — The illegitimate daughter of an Edmonton man killed in a Pacific Western Airlines jet crash at Cranbrook last February has been awarded $22,500 in an out-of-court settlement with the airline.

Victoria Lynn Harvey, 9, now is living with her mother in Toronto.

Alberta Supreme Court Sept. 14 declared Victoria Harvey to be the only living child of Paul Lance Walker, who died in the crash and whose estate is being administered by a public trustee.

The settlement was confirmed Wednesday by Justice M. B. O'Byrne, as required under the Alberta Infants Act.

The settlement amounted to $24,397.20 but $1,897.20 was deducted for funeral expenses and other costs associated with Walker's death.

Turner Letter 'Gossip'

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien dismissed the economic newsletters of former finance minister John Turner Thursday as "just a gossip column you can have for 15 cents at a newsstand in Toronto."

His remark in the Commons followed the release of a September economic newsletter by Turner and his associate W. A. Macdonald — the second of these private analyses of the government's economic performance made public this week.

Progressive Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens gave out copies of the newsletter entitled The Road Ahead.

It says the announcement of the new program following Trudeau's trip to the Bonn economic summit prompted senior government officials to ask, "Who's in charge?"

"The most immediate issues are how much damage has been done to the credibility of the cabinet generally and the ministers particularly affected individually and what has been the effect on the morale and effectiveness of the public service?

"The next issues are what the government then does about the damage and collapsing morale."

Stevens asked Chretien if he felt his prerogatives as finance minister had been undermined by the prime minister's restraint dictum.

Stevens refused for a second day to tell reporters the source of his copy of the newsletter. He did not say whether any more of the newsletters, marked "private and confidential," can be expected.

Turner speculates in the newsletter on the outcome of the next federal election saying: "It now is just possible to contemplate a bare or near Tory majority with no more than a handful of Quebec seats."

He supports the intent of the federal spending restraints, saying the government has moved in the right direction by deciding to cut both its expenditures and the size of the public service.

Turner, adds, however, that there is uncertainty concerning the use the government will make of the money it saves.

"The key to the expenditure-saving effort is not to blow the savings on the wrong things," he says, recommending the government use the benefits to reduce its deficit and stimulate the public sector to invest in new projects.

Stevens estimated Turner and his associates are earning almost $300,000 a year from the economic newsletter.

He speculated that Turner's prime motivation in criticizing a government he is widely rumored to be anxious to lead is purely monetary.

Que. Advised To Keep $ Ties With Canada

QUEBEC (CP) — Studies released by the Quebec government Thursday indicate it would be cheaper for an independent Quebec to opt for a monetary union with Canada than to go it alone with its own Quebec dollar.

The three studies tabled in the national assembly by Claude Morin, intergovernmental affairs minister and initiator of the PQ referendum strategy, also suggest the advantages of a monetary union outweigh the accompanying drawback of limited control over monetary policy.

The Parti Quebecois has decided to include monetary union with Canada in the political sovereignty — and economic association — package it will ask Quebec voters to decide upon in a 1979 or 1980 referendum.

The studies — part of a $300,000 project to investigate aspects of Quebec's present and future links with the rest of Canada — provide clues as to why the PQ would want to maintain monetary union.

Laval University economist Bernard Fortin notes that if Quebec adopted its own money, the Quebec dollar would be subject to "uncertainty" on exchange markets.

Speculators could take advantage of a lack of confidence in the new currency and this could prove costly to a sovereign Quebec.

Fortin says the best way for Quebec to maintain the value of its money would be "to maintain the status quo in the monetary regime while participating in the elaboration of Canada's monetary policy."

The external factors affecting the Canadian and Quebec economies are largely the same, another element said to favor continued monetary union.

One of the justifications for a separate Quebec currency is that it would give Quebec the tools to set its own monetary policy.

But Fortin says that an independent monetary policy would be ineffective in dealing with problems such as unemployment, better handled by fiscal measures.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

Possibly the greatest thrill that can come to bridge players arises in a team match when one-half of the team-of-four, sitting, let us say, North-South, bids and makes a game. And when the deal is replayed, their partners, sitting East-West on the same deal, also bid and make a game. Such was the situation in a recent team-of-four event.

East-West vulnerable.
West deals.

♡ J 9 8 5
◇ Q J 9 8 5 2
♣ 10

WEST	EAST
♠ K 4	♠ A Q 10 5
♡ 3	♡ K 6 2
◇ 7 6 3	◇ K 10
♣ A K 9 8 7 5 2	♣ J 6 4 3

SOUTH
♠ J 9 8 6 2
♡ A Q 10 7 4
◇ A 4
♣ Q

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	3 ◇	3 NT	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Dble.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

With North having made a jump overcall in diamonds, showing a six-or-seven card suit within a very weak hand, South's four-heart bid was a very risky call. But things turned out well because North happened to have four hearts.

After winning the opening lead with his club kind, West laid down the king of spades. He then led his remaining spade to East's queen. To trick four East played a low trump. South played low and dummy's eight won the trick. The nine of trumps came next and another successful finesse was taken against East's king. The queen of diamonds was now led and East covered with the king. South's ace of trumps then felled East's king, and a diamond to dummy's jack felled East's ten. South was now able to discard his remaining spades on dummy's diamonds. The fact that the defenders could have beaten the four-heart contract in a few different ways is admitted.

When the deal was replayed, East arrived at a three-notrump contract, with North not having made a bid, and South passed throughout. South's opening lead was a low spade. As is evident, declarer now made 11 tricks: four spades and seven clubs.

In conclusion, team-of-four play is the most skillful type of bridge game. If, for example, the opponents bid two grand slams against you, and make them, your partners will hold the same cards your opponents held and will have the opportunity to bid the grand slams, thus resulting in a standoff. And so the element of "luck" is eliminated.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, December 23
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on important relationship — it stands or falls by what is said and done on this day. Pisces, Virgo, Libra figure in scenario. See clearly, not through mist of wishful thinking. Go slow, play waiting game.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practical matters dominate. Work, basic issues and health command attention. Line up priorities. Get organized. Accept additional responsibility. Older individual backs up words with actions. There might be room for you at a more elevated position.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotions could dominate. Key is to strive for balance. Try to provide equal time for logic. Member of opposite sex pays compliment and makes demand. Aries, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 9.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can break through red tape, obstacles. Key is to make new start, nourish fresh contacts. Leave door open, maintain options. Leo plays significant role. Get valid home or property appraisal. Yes, the way to romance will be clarified.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow through on hunch, teach and learn, rise above jealous persons who snipe with words. Aquarius, Cancer figure prominently — so does the number 11. Be versatile, give full play to intellectual curiousity. Short trip, relatives dominate scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Spet. 22): Expand horizons. You could strike pay dirt. Money celebration is due. Elements of luck, timing are riding with you. Number 3 is in picture. Emphasis on personal possessions, accounting procedures. Protect your rights. Stand tall!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your position is strong. Know it, be direct and confident. Take lead. Roadblock is removed. Aquarius, Scorpio figure in scenario. What was misplaced is recovered. Study Virgo message. Make personal appearances, wear bright colors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll obtain answers to perplexing problems. Ghosts of past can be eradicated. Be prepared for swift decisions, changes, travel instructions, relationship that goes from mild to warm to very hot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on making wishes come true. Taurus, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 6. Family member supports your stand. Be a gracious winner; do not rub salt in wounds. There is discussion concerning residence, life style.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Define terms, check sources. One in authority may ask you to back contentions, statements. Pisces, Virgo figure in scenario. Trim fat, get rid of non-essentials — and guilt feelings. You'll get "back stage" view.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect now accents power-through-planning. Older individual gives green light, once you demonstrate dedication. Travel, language and communication grab spotlight. You are going to receive a surprise — and it is money.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish what you start — strive to get public pulse. Aries, Libra, Scorpio individuals figure prominently. Accent on taxes, leases, inheritance, money controlled by "legal strings." You get news which vindicates views.

IF DECEMBER 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you made change of residence or life style this year. Before December is finished, you make marvelous new contact. January and October will be your most significant months of 1979, a year which sees you "finding the truth." You are perceptive, attractive, capable of expressing yourself in a challenging, meaningful way. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You will be rid of unnecessary burden in February. Members of opposite sex tend to "spoil" you. Individual who is wise ans spiritual becomes an ally in January. You are a natural psychologist.

Caring for the Gift Plant

hilda beastall

Outdoor garden plants are likely to appear at our homes as gifts this season, for our general climate is well known to provide chances for successful planting all through winter.

Devoted gardeners will plant their gifts promptly, but many will be put aside and temporarily forgotten.

This is the reminder to bring back the already-received plant to mind, so that you will now do something about it.

It may be some kind of shrub or a young tree, even a fruit tree that you had wanted. But where did you put the gift after the first appraisal? I hope it has been out in the garden where the air is moist and cool and where the wind will not have blown it down nor removed moisture from the leaves if it is an evergreen kind.

You should now decide where the plant shall go. Take as much time for this decision as for the work of planting; your future pleasure in the gift depends on having it where it gives the best effect, or where it will grow to full development.

The only kind of soil that should not be worked now is a heavy clay loam which will pack like concrete around young roots as it dries into cakes by spring.

A temporary planting in a raised mound of soil is an answer to this situation. Take soil from a compost heap and mound it with leafmould, some coarse sand, and perhaps topsoil from a worked area. Any or all of these are useful materials in either temporary or permanent planting.

Make the root ball firm against wind and frost damage, and provide a stake beside it before covering the roots. In spring, the permanent site will be more easily prepared, and the plant will have come to no harm in the meantime.

Rigid plant containers of all kinds must be removed from plants before the roots are placed in the ground. If the root ball appears tight and solid, press it firmly between the hands just enough to loosen the feeding roots on the outside of the ball. Notice if the soil ball is dry or moderately damp.

If dry, place in pail of cold water outdoors for an hour while preparing the planting hole. You may notice bubbles coming from the soil until it is well soaked. These show that the dry soil had allowed a great deal of air to enter; a soaking will take care of the plant's needs for the winter together with the normal precipitation. Only if planted in dry soil will it require further watering, for the new roots will not be fully established.

Should it be impossible to attempt planting for any reason at time of receiving the gift, be sure that your plant is left outdoors. Too many people think that the basement or carport is the ideal place to store new plants while waiting to be put into the garden, but anything short of damp, cool surroundings can be a disaster — not a kindness.

These friendly words apply equally to plants received for growing on balcony or roof gardens, on patio gardens and sundecks. If the plants are grown outdoors, and are intended for outdoors, keep them outside while waiting. Choose a place sheltered from strong winds and from frost damage if hard weather comes.

For shrubs having leaves, or trees with needles, a fine spray of water over the branches will prevent dehydration, which results in loss of leaves, or needles. Use the water spray when the weather is dry or when cold with a dry wind. These types of plants are only partially dormant in winter, but with the disturbance of their roots they are unable to supply the moisture which normally compensates for losses to dehydration by low humidity.

Your outdoor gift plants will respond in spring beyond your expectations if you provide the care they need now and through winter.

Here's to B.C. From Bennett

Following is the text of Premier Bill Bennett's Christmas message:

It is a great pleasure, on behalf of the government of British Columbia, to extend to all British Columbians warm wishes for a joyous Christmas season.

As 1978 draws to a close and a new year is fast upon us, like many of you, I look back at all the ups and downs — the frustrations and triumphs — which we have all gone through.

As premier, I have had a number of exciting experiences this year. I have represented our province in national and international settings, and participated in the cut and thrust of legislative debate as the business of government is carried on.

But perhaps my fondest memories are of meeting many, many of you while travelling in our beautiful province.

Riding the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway I met hundreds of fellow British Columbians.

Heading up the interior on the B.C. Railway, we made literally dozens of stops, meeting people every bit as committed to the future of this province as I am myself.

You know, we may talk about our sound economy, we may talk about our natural resources, and of them we can be proud.

But for their development and their potential, we have one resource to thank — our people, our finest resource.

Christmas is a special time — a time for families and friends to gather together to share the joys and traditions of the season. A time to reflect on the hopes for the future.

Christmas is a time for sharing kinship among the wider family of peoples and faiths who honor the spirit of peace and goodwill.

Once again we are reminded that what joins us matters far more than what divides us.

Before the Judge

A 21-year-old man was committed for higher-court trial on a charge of attempted murder following a preliminary hearing which ended Thursday in provincial court.

Anthony David Lowe, of 273 Burnside West, was charged in connection with a July 8 stabbing in James Bay involving Sharon Ann Trahon.

Judge Fred Green ordered the committal following the two-day hearing at which Barry Mah Ming represented Lowe and Wayne Smith acted for the Crown.

The second of two 18-year-olds charged with attempted murder, causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure and breaking and entering was denied bail Thursday by Judge Blake Allan.

Kelly Norman Lambert, 2844 Rockwell, was charged in connection with an attack Dec. 3 on an 83-year-old Victoria West woman, Julia Knoll, and a break-in at her home at 533 Raynor.

Jointly charged with Lambert is Wesley James Kennedy, 601 Wilson, who was ordered held in custody on Dec. 6.

Both have elected trial by judge without jury and their preliminary hearing has been set for Jan. 25 and 26.

A 32-year-old man who was on mandatory supervision from William Head prison was handed 60-day jail sentences to be served concurrently with a sentence he is serving.

George Louie pleaded guilty to two counts of common assault arising out of incidents in the early morning of Dec. 16 in James Bay.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Louie dragged a 39-year-old woman to the ground in the 400-block Menzies at about 1:15 a.m., and then grabbed a 22-year-old woman who was in a phone booth in the same block about 10 minutes later.

Lang said Louie was caught by two security guards at Douglas and Courtney about an hour later.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Louie was serving a 3½-year sentence imposed Nov. 17, 1975, in Nanaimo for assault causing bodily harm and had his mandatory supervision revoked over the incidents. He asked Allan to consider the concurrent sentences because of the possibility of "double jeopardy" in this case.

Allan agreed and handed out two consecutive sentences, but made them concurrent to the sentence Louie is serving.

An 18-year-old charged with a break-in Tuesday morning at a catering firm on Kings Road and with the indecent assault of a female employee elected trial by judge and jury.

Christopher Joel Boivin was charged with breaking and entering and indecent assault in connection with a break-in at Aalter Catering, 975 Kings.

Boivin was denied bail by Allan and was remanded until next Wednesday to set a preliminary hearing date.

An 18-year-old woman who attempted to alter a $1 postal money order to read $171 was given a suspended sentence, placed on eight months' probation and ordered to perform 60 hours of community service work.

Cheryl Ann Hitchmough, 3016 Jutland, pleaded guilty Dec. 15 to uttering a forged document and was remanded until Thursday for a pre-sentence report.

The charge against co-accused Terry Allan Hildebrandt of the same address was stayed earlier.

Defence lawyer Scott Marshall asked Allan to consider the fact it was Hitchmough's first criminal offence and that she did it an the suggestion of a girlfriend in order to obtain money for Christmas.

Allan called it an "amateurish effort" before suspending sentence.

A 21-year-old who was given a 2½-year jail term by Judge E.J.C. Stewart in Victoria county court on Tuesday was given 120-day concurrent sentences by Allan on three counts of false pretences.

Stephen John Rawlings, sentenced Tuesday for the Nov. 27 attempted robbery of a grocery store on Government, entered guilty pleas Dec. 12 to the three counts of passing worthless cheques.

Two of the cheques, for $72.77 and $62.90, were written Nov. 23 and 25 to Eaton's while the third cheque, for $115.45, was written Nov. 24 to A and B Sound.

Mah Ming said Rawlings asked for the federal penitentiary term (two years or more) on Tuesday because he felt the psychologial treatment facilities were better at the federal level.

Allan granted bail to one of two brothers charged with breaking into a medical building at 1105 Pandora on Dec. 12.

David Robert Hansen, 18, and Ronald Hansen, 19, both of 1870 McKenzie, were charged with breaking and entering and the older Hansen was also charged with mischief causing wilful damage to a police patrol car.

Lawyers Douglas Macfarlane, for the younger brother, and Robert Johnston elected trial by judge without jury on the break-in charge.

Following a bail hearing Thursday, Allan ordered the younger brother's release on his own recognizance with two sureties at $750 each.

Both were remanded to next Wednesday to fix a preliminary hearing date and to hear argument on an application by Johnston to waive Ronald Hansen's right to a preliminary hearing. Lang indicated he was not prepared to agree to Johnston's motion and needed more time to look into the matter.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Basil Vincent Rouault, 23, of 1003-B Wurtele, $100; and Michael Scott Edward McGraw, 20, of 880 Vernon, $200.

In addition, Rouault was fined $25 for driving without a valid driver's licence and McGraw was ordered to perform 60 hours of community service work.

Davin Must Originate Programs

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission has told Davin Enterprises Ltd. to start originating programs in Saanich.

The CRTC, in renewing Davin's cable licence for another five years, noted the firm was authorized last year to operate an audio community channel for original local programming but has taken no action.

Expressing concern, the CRTC said it expects Davin to prepare plans for the early introduction of the service. In addition the company must negotiate with Victoria Cablevision Ltd. for the continued distribution of their community programming in the small area it serves.

The commission noted a recent intervention by Vancouver Co-operative Radio for cable distribution of CFRO-FM, Vancouver, and expects Davin to apply for this service if it is technically feasible.

Licences for seven other Vancouver Island and Gulf Islands cable television systems were renewed for five-year periods, to March 31, 1984, subject to individual conditions.

They cover Saanich Cablevision Ltd. in North Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney; Saltspring Cablevision (1972) Ltd. on Salt Spring Island; Youbou Television Ltd. at Lake Cowichan; Ucluelet Video Services Ltd. at Ucluelet and Port Albion; Microwave Cablevision Ltd. (Northwest Community Video Ltd.) at Nanaimo; Campbell River TV Association at Campbell River and surrounding area, and District 69 Cablevision Inc. in the Parksville-Qualicum Beach area.

Dog Curb Cash Aid Offered

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford's offer of financial assistance for dog control in the Capital Regional District should be accepted quickly by the regional board, Esquimalt MLA Lyle Kahl said Thursday.

He said the offer was made this week at a meeting with the minister attended by western community regional directors, farmers from Metchosin, Langford and Sooke, along with representatives from the sheep and goat breeding associations.

The minister has offered $10,000 for the initial year and half of any shortfall for the first three years up to a maximum of $10,000 per year.

"This means it's possible to obtain $20,000 in the first year," Kahl said.

He said Shelford, who was minister when the Domestic Animal Protection Act was passed in the 1960s, sympathized with the farmers.

Kahl said the plan for the Capital Regional District will be modelled on programs in the central and north Okanagan where the emphasis is being placed on the responsibilities of dog owners.

He said the regional board is expected to deal with the issue when it meets on Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Animals Join Nativity Pageant

All the sights, sounds and smells of the farmyard will come to Emmanuel Baptist Church this Christmas, as assorted donkeys, sheep, goats and chickens join in a live Nativity pageant presented by church members in a specially constructed outdoor manger.

Wayne Wickett, one of the organizers of the pageant, says as far as he knows, it's the first time such a live tableau — complete with all livestock — has been staged in Victoria.

"We're trying to put the Christ back in Christmas," he said.

Obtaining the animal stars on loan and arranging their transportation and accommodation has been quite a headache, Wickett said.

They include two donkeys named Derby and Victoria, who are coming from their Saanich Peninsula home.

Human participants in the Bethlehem manger scene will include church members as Joseph, Mary, shepherds, angels and the three wise men.

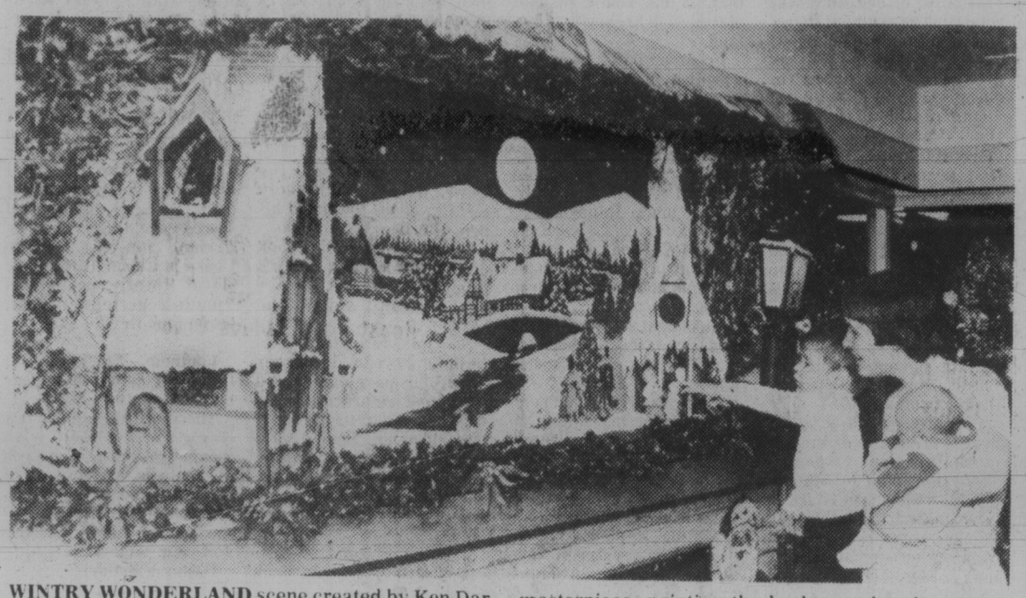
"The shepherds are going to have be real shepherds."

Although the organizers would have preferred a real baby for the role, for obvious reasons the infant Jesus will probably have to be represented by a doll.

The pageant will be presented at Emmanuel Baptist on Cedar Hill Cross Road (beside the Henderson Park community centre) from 8 to 11 p.m. Christmas Eve, and again on Wednesday and Thursday next week from 6 to 9 p.m.

Christmas carols will be sung by the Emmanuel youth chorus, and refreshments will be available.

Wickett says all Victorians are invited to visit the outdoor Nativity pageant.



WINTRY WONDERLAND scene created by Ken Darling of 4330 Houlihan Place is source of fascination for Mrs. Todd Ryan and her two sons, Stewart and Patrick. Darling, while recuperating from open-heart surgery, spent 10 hours creating his mantlepiece masterpiece, painting the background and creating the house and church out of wood and plastic in order to get three-dimensional effect. Household plaster was used to make the snow on the roof. John McKay photo.

Saanich Firemen Get Pact

Saanich firefighters have approved a two-year contract with the municipality which keeps them on a par with their Victoria counterparts.

The agreement, retroactive to last Jan. 1, was reached Wednesday.

It has been ratified by the firemen but still has to have the approval of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, bargaining agency for municipal employers.

The contract provides a wage increase of five per cent retroactive to Jan. 1, with another 1.12 per cent to be added if approved by the Anti-Inflation Board.

If both 1978 increases become effective, a first-class firefighter will be paid $1,577 a month.

There is to be another interim five-per-cent increase in 1979 with provision for a catch up to any extra increase awarded Victoria firefighters.

Other provisions in the contract include a four-day, 37½-hour work week for the three-man inspection division and the reclassification of eight lieutenants to captains.

Saanich administrator Bill Tremayne said today he feels the agreement is fair for both sides.

He said he hopes to get the retroactive pay to the firemen before the end of the year.

Roberts Quits Ferries

Nanaimo businessman Graeme Roberts has resigned as a director of the B.C. Ferry Corporation, Transport Minister Alex Fraser said Thursday.

In a news release, Fraser, chairman of the ferry corporation board of directors, expressed regret that Roberts' personal business would not allow him to continue with the corporation.

Roberts resigned from the board shortly after being appointed early in 1977, complaining that Jack Davis, former transportation minister, wanted to run the ferry corporation like a government department.

Premier Bill Bennett persuaded him to withdraw his resignation, re-iterating a promise that the boards of directors of crown corporations would be independent.

Delivery Van Found Intact

A delivery van with more than $700 worth of goods inside, stolen earlier in the week in downtown Victoria, has been recovered undamaged, the goods untouched, and with the gas tank still full.

City police found the van, which belonged to Greater Victoria Delivery Service, parked at Coronation and Shelbourne Wednesday.

Driver Ron Morawetz was making deliveries in the 1200-block Government at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday when he saw a long-haired youth jump into the vehicle and drive off.

John Pollard, owner of the company, said the packages were not opened.

But two watches belonging to Morawetz were missing.

NEW SCHEME WILL PUSH 18,000 OFF WELFARE

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy's ministry is preparing a new program designed to get 18,000 people off welfare.

The minister told a news conference Thursday the program will be aimed at providing jobs, education and skills to single employable recipients under 30 years of age.

Mrs. McCarthy also disclosed that the 33,000 families in B.C. on welfare will get $8 a month more per child for the first three months of 1979 to compensate for a cut in federal family allowances.

She said the special payment, affecting 51,000 children on welfare, will cost the province $1.2 million.

Additional changes in income assistance rates and benefits are slated to bd announced in February for April 1.

McCarthy said she hopes to develop new initiatives in the next few months to increase opportunities for unemployed employables now receiving income assistance.

This might take the form of subsidized wages, she indicated, but she expects to hold discussions with the federal government on this aspect.

Woman Heads Yukon

OTTAWA (CP) — Ione Cameron Christensen, mayor of Whitehorse and descendent of Klondike gold rush adventurers, was named Thursday the new commissioner of the Yukon—head of the executive and chief federal representative in the northern territory.

Mrs. Christensen, 45, was named by Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner to take over Jan. 20, responding to proposals to appoint a Yukoner instead of a southern Canadian.

Born Ione Cameron in Dawson Creek, her great-grandfather and grandfather went to the Yukon during the 1898 gold rush over the Chilkoot Pass.

She grew up in the Yukon community of Fort Selkirk where her father, Gordon (Cam) Cameron, was posted with the RCMP. He now is sergeant-at-arms for the Yukon territorial council.

Educated in Duncan, Whitehorse and San Mateo, Calif., business college, Mrs. Christensen worked in a variety of business jobs and for the territorial government, as a juvenile court judge and, for the last three years, as mayor of Whitehorse.

Crash Report Angers PWA, Transport Dept.

CALGARY (CP) — The release of a conditional draft of a ministry of transport report on last February's crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook has angered both PWA and ministry of transport officials.

PWA officials said they would not comment on specifics of the preliminary report but said its "premature release to the media was irresponsible."

A ministry official in Vancouver said releasing details of the conditional draft "makes everything worse" because everyone involved will be confused by changes that may be made in the report before it is finalized.

But H. A. Fawcett, chief of aviation safety investigation for the ministry, said Thursday when the report was made public by the Calgary Herald, there will be few, if any, changes between the draft and the final report.

The conditional draft of the report, sent to parties involved, said some of the 43 persons who died in the Feb. 11 crash could have been saved.

It criticized, for various reasons, airport firefighting facilities; the plane's equipment and personnel, including the pilot; communication regulations; and the operations manual of the Boeing 737.

The final draft is expected early next year after input has been received from those parties involved in the accident.

Pacific Western said today it has requested the return from Transport Canada of certain aircraft components and other items to allow the company to conduct its own evaluation of the findings in the report which the company considers to be incomplete and possibly inaccurate in certain areas.

The airline spokesman said the stated purpose of the preliminary draft report remaining confidential was to avoid the public being misinformed.

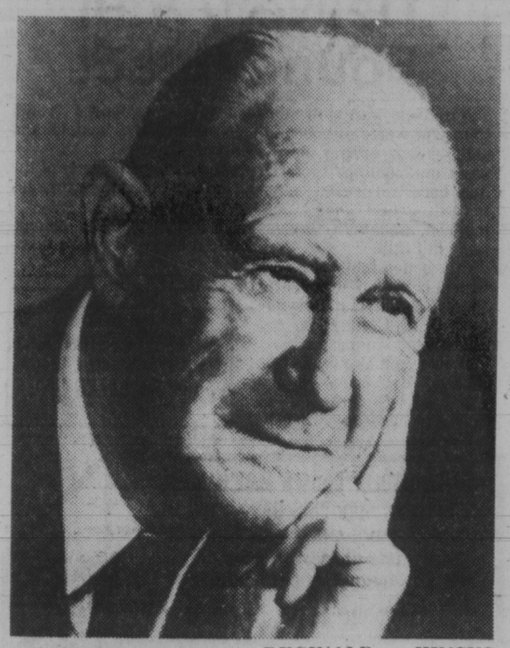
He Was Victoria's Mr. Pantomime



elizabeth forbes

REGINALD HINCKS wrote, directed and performed in all the Christmas-time pantomimes put on in Victoria 30 to 40 years ago. He's still fondly remembered by those who saw him as the Widow Twanky and in various other roles, and the jingles he wrote can still be recalled.

Once upon a time during a Yuletide season in Victoria, the most important thing on any "must-do" list would have been attendance at the Christmas pantomime.

Every year, as regularly as clock-work, lovable nursery rhyme and fairy tale people came alive in fantasy stories with titles like Cinderella, Alladin, Ali Baba, Babes in the Woods, Robinson Crusoe, Alice in Wonderland, and many others.

Talk to anyone over 40 years of age today who has lived in this city the best part of their lives and before you have reminisced very long they will speak of those presentations.

When they do, the one person they mention over and over again is Reginald N. Hincks who wrote, produced and directed every Christmas pantomime put on back in those days — and acted in many of them as well.

Not only did he do that, but during the First World War, with the help of a large amateur dramatic group, he ran charity revues for the Red Cross.

After that war he staged professional shows in what was the Princess Theatre (later the Playhouse and now the Haida) on Yates Street.

Each show included a comedy and a silent movie and a stage play — a new one each week.

Those plays, which Hincks either wrote or adapted, and the showing of movies, continued until the advent of talkies.

His first Christmas pantomime, Every Kid, was staged in 1909 at the old Victoria Theatre on the corner of Douglas and View Streets, where Eatons is now located.

He wrote the story, the jingles and the dialogue along the lines of a popular play of that day called Everyman.

In the lead, as the Kid, was Phyllis Davis, now Mrs. D'Oyly Rochfort of Vancouver.

When the Royal Theatre opened on Broughton Street in 1913, Hincks moved his pantomimes to the new location and it was there that these yearly offerings achieved increasing success.

Outstanding in his long list of fantasies was Puss in Boots, again with Phyllis Davis in the lead as Puss; Peggy Pearce as Gabriel; H. J. Davis as the King of Utopia and J. Graham-Graham as the queen.

Still others were The Old Woman in the Shoe in which Hincks took the part of the Widow Twanky and The Wizard of Oz with A. D. M. Fairbairn, at one time secretary in Government House and an accomplished artist, as the Wizard as well as designing the program cover.

One of the last of the Hincks productions before he retired in 1946 — and the first peace time presentation in seven years following the end of the Second World War — was the story of the life and times of Jack and the Beanstalk, perhaps the most magic of all the stories of childhood.

In it Ilace Roskelly was the Fairy Queen, a very important person among the "little people" of that particular pantomime.

Recently, to fill in some details in the life of this remarkable man, I spent a short time with his daughter, Miss Margaret Hincks.

She told me her father was London born, that he had been a chorister at Magdalen College, Oxford, and that, in his youth, he had played field hockey for England.

He dreamed of becoming a professional actor. Instead he worked in his uncle's brewery.

However, he did join an amateur group of players, among whom were Noel Coward's father, Arthur, and his uncle, Randolf.

Hincks was 35 when he came to Canada — and to Vancouver Island — with his wife and their three children in 1905.

He bought 200 acres in the Cowichan area and built the place known today as Wilcuma.

Four years later he decided to bring his family to Victoria and here he bought acreage on Ten Mile Point.

It was wide-open country then and with only three other houses out there.

Almost immediately he became interested in producing the English pantomimes and from then on, during all his active years, there was hardly a day that he didn't leave the Ten Mile Point place about mid-morning, carrying a small basket of food for his lunch and dinner, and he never returned home until late at night.

Rehearsals always started for the current pantomime in early October and from then until the stage lights went on, the pace steadily increased.

As soon as the holiday season was over — usually around Twelfth Night — Hincks was planning the next year's production.

"Once he had an idea firmly in his mind, the words, jingles and the story just flowed off the end of his pen," his daughter recalls.

Miss Hincks never took any real part in her father's productions.

"I couldn't sing," she says.

She was away from Victoria for 20 years during her active business career and when she returned Hincks was nearing retirement. It was then she helped with various arangements for the pantomimes and, because she had a good speaking voice, did many of the prologues.

Postscript — Going back in memory, Miss Hincks spoke of some well-known Victorians who sung, danced and acted in Hincks productions.

Among those she named (not necessarily in correct sequence as to years) were Ernie Petch, Bob MacKenzie, Eileen and Frank Allwood, Dorothy Stuart Robertson, Roberta Balcolm, Bob Webb, Dick Reeves, Maris Hale, Mabel Hickman, Peggy Lewis, Beverley Ivings, Eric Littler, "Cappy" Goodlake and Wynne Shaw and her dancers.

She recalled that Eva Hart played Elsie in The Yeoman of the Guard; That Major Tayler and the Campbell twins were the White Knight and Tweedledum and Tweedledee in Alice in Wonderland and that George Cheke of Cobble Hill, in one Royal Theatre pantomine, "made a perfect six-foot, seven-inch Devil."

Footnote - This is the last time my column will appear before Christmas Day.

Therefore these next few lines are written with thought of you . . . and you . . . and you out there, all of whom I name as friends.

May the joy of the Christmas season fill your hearts and your homes!

Happy Yuletide.

Work's the Best Medicine For Those Yuletide Blues

Leslie Holbrook

"Christmas Day had been lived through and was now nearly over; that was the main thing," says ageing Miss Letty in Barbara Pym's novel about seniors (Quartet in Autumn).

I hope you are not finding your Yuletide "an occasion to be got through." It is for some, unfortunately.

"Christmas comes but once a year
And when it comes it brings good cheer."

So goes the old jingle. But for many who are no longer young and without close relatives or friends the Holiday Season can be a difficult time.

Opposed to those of us who, in our senior years, lead busy, interesting, satisfying lives are those who face only disheartening problems — magnified at this time of year.

Dr. Kevin Hartigan, psychology professor, Illinois Institute of Technology, says more North Americans fell depressed over the year-end than at any other time of year.

He specifies people in financial difficulties who cannot be a part of compulsive, crazy Christmas shopping (or do become a part and get into even deeper financial trouble); women and men recently widowed who, already depressed, will grow worse during the period; the sick, handicapped and others cut off from the mainstream of society.

If you are feeling depressed in late December you are not alone; but you can do something about it.

If you have lost your mate, remember this happens to almost all married folk. List pleasurable things you can do alone or with friends. Include doing things to help others — an excellent way to get your mind off yourself. In any event get busy and keep busy at something worthwhile. Your loneliness will lessen.

In hospital or if housebound, think about the many handicapped people who continue to make fine contributions to their community — some to the wider world. Resolve to add your bit instead of groaning about your fate.

If your depression stems from spending too much money for Christmas gifts and such, it's too late now to say "no" to the holiday hucksters. Better budgeting in '79 is the best I can suggest here.

Whatever the cause of your year-end blues, work which you are capable of doing is likely to be the best medicine. So give yourself some tasks even though "nobody works between Christmas and new years."

Little Johnny Flips

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johnny, who attends school in Baltimore, hadn't done his homework, but that didn't bother him.

Thomas Foster, Baltimore's assistant school superintendent for curriculum, said a city teacher was giving her pupils a true-false test when she noticed that Johnny was busily flipping a coin in the back of the room and marking answers on his paper. Puzzled, she asked him what he was doing.

"Well, Mrs. Jones, I didn't really have time to study, so I'm using the coin. If it comes up heads, I put down 'True.' If it comes up tails, I say 'False.'"

The teacher sighed and wished Johnny good luck.

One-half hour later, when the rest of the pupils were done, the teacher looked up and saw Johnny still flipping away.

"Johnny, everybody else finished 10 minutes ago," she said. "What's taking you so long?"

Johnny replied: "It's like you always tell us. I'm checking my work."

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N1.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: The other night at my friend's sleepover party I tried a cigarette (I only had one). This morning I had two more and I am dying for one now. I don't even know why because I don't especially like the flavor. I guess it makes me feel more secure.

Everyone says it is okay to try one when you are my age (I'm 13) but I am afraid that I will get hooked. If my mom ever found out I had tried them she would kill me!

What do you think I should do to stop myself? I would appreciate any kind of advice you could give me.

ANSWER: First I would advise you not to have any more cigarettes. Whoever is telling you that it is okay to smoke because you are only 13 certainly doesn't know what they are talking about, and I would suggest that you stop listening to that kind of advice.

If you are feeling insecure, then I suggest you would feel more insecure if you continued to do things that you know your parents disapprove of and that you don't want to do anyway.

When you feel like having a cigarette, get busy and do something else, preferably something active. If your friends are pressuring you to smoke, tell them to stop because you don't want to smoke.

I sincerely hope you succeed in not smoking — it will be a tremendous saving both in terms of your health and your pocket book.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a girl of 13 and I have a sister of 20. We are very close and I care about her tremendously. The other day when she asked me to get something out of her purse I found a container with the Pill.

I feel sort of sick inside because I never imagined she would ever think about sex (she has a steady boyfriend of one year who is super). She ha disappointed me and I can't look her in the face anymore

I wish I had never found those pills. I could never tell her that I know her secret. I am very shy when it comes to that subject. What should I do to regain my confidence in her?

ANSWER: You do not say you are morally shocked, but that the very thought of your sister and sex shocks you. And you say that you are shy on the subject. I suggest that the problem is in your attitude to sex. You are at the age of puberty and have not got accustomed to the idea of your sexual nature.

I think you have to accept the fact that people, including you and your sister, are sexual beings; that sex is part of what you come into the world with and that is meant to be a good thing. The fact that it is abused both by individuals and in the media and advertising does not mean that sex is in itself bad, any more than the abuse of food and drink makes them bad in themselves.

As for the moral implications of your unmarried sister using the Pill, you my decide what YOU are going to do about premarital sex in the future, but, because you came across the information accidentally and your sister has not confided in you, it is none of your business.

Mayor's Slippery Reply

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch was talking with his constituents on Fifth Avenue, when someone asked him what measures the city might take to cope with the increase in oil prices announced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"I'm going to try to use less oil in my salad," the mayor replied.

How to Avoid Getting Skunked

Joan Watson

January fur sales are just weeks away. If you're interested in a coat or a jacket, some worthwhile savings will be available. The retail markup over the wholesale price of a coat ranges from 50 to 300 per cent depending on the store's overhead, pricing policy and other factors and that leaves ample room for reductions during a clearance. How good a deal you get depends on how much you know about choosing a fur so a few pointers from an expert might help you.

In speaking with government inspectors, retailers, and other knowledgeable people in the fur trade, the name Sidney Shipper came up frequently as one of the most astute people in the business. Mr. Shipper is Dean of Fashion at George Brown College of Applied Arts and Technology in Toronto and, more particularly, a fur specialist recognized internationally. You'd need pictures to make a lot of his buying points for consumers, but even without them there's a lot to tell.

Six out of 10 fur coats sold in Canada are mink. And, well-chosen, they're excellent value. The choice of color, quality and price is endless. Everything from choice full pelts, to coats made from inexpensive paws and "ovals" (skins from the head) are found on the market today, so the budget shopper doesn't have to necessarily discard the idea of mink.

Raccoon, once a low priced favorite, is now in high demand and prices show it. Sheared muskrat, which used to be the middle-priced favorite for women who could afford a better quality than electric seal (sheared rabbit) but couldn't take the price or the idea of Alaska seal, has now fallen out of favour. Persian lamb is still popular but remember that because it's a wool coat, not a fur, it isn't as warm.

After you've some idea of the fur you want, keep in mind that whether you want brown Persian lamb, white mink, or dyed black rabbit, quality furs have a natural bluish cast to the color. Less desirable furs have a red shading. As they age, the red in a poor quality coat becomes more noticeable.

You've probably seen a furrier blow on a coat. Use the same trick. It can tell you if the fur is its natural shade or if it's been colored. There's less chance of color change in natural furs. If you decide on a color tipped or a blended coat, know that even the finest quality will show subtle color changes in time. But some of the dyed coats are really great.

When you blow on a pelt, a colored fur will have a visible color change about a quarter inch from the skin. There's some gradual shading in a natural fur, but not a "high tide mark".

Ask the furrier for the name of the color processing, and take the manufacturer's name. Hopefully you're going to be shopping in three or four stores to make price and quality comparisons, so go all the way and make a few phone calls to manufacturers as well. You'll find them candid and helpful. Ask how the color processing on a particular fur is standing up. The manufacturer has already sold the coat. He's not going to be evasive if an astute shopper does some checking with him. If he is less than helpful, that tells you something about him, and probably his furs.

Blowing on the fur will also help you judge the quality. Poor fur stays parted. Quality fur springs back into place. The front edge of the coat should also be densely furred with no leather showing.

If you're taller than average, have a look at the advertisements placed in publications by manufacturers. The models are generally tall. If the length is ample on them, mark down the name as one brand to try on.

Get a saleswoman in the fur store to try on the coats that interest you. You can be more objective about the style and color when you see garments on somebody else. By the same token, take along a Polaroid camera and get them to take a fore and aft shot of you. These candid shots will tell you infinitely more than the mirror.

The other day in a fur department, there were two mink coats of equal quality, color and similar styling. One was $7,000 the other was $9,000. How could that happen in a reputable store? Easy. The cheaper one was left over from last August's fur sale. The second was new stock. It is illegal to raise the price on a fur coat to the original tag once the price has been reduced.

The two coats were spotted by Mr. Shipper who could tell they were of equal value. A consumer with little knowledge might well think the $2,000 difference in the prices represented a difference in quality. Knowing something about what you're buying is your protection.

When you get serious about one coat, check to see if it has a French lining. That's got nothing to do with the fabric. It's a lining that's loose at the hem and can be lifted up to reveal the workmanship and color of the inside of the coat. Looking at the leather side of the fur will tell you a lot. Make sure the seams are not overstitched. That could be an indicator that the leather is weak or brittle.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was married recently in an all-white church wedding, one of the most beautiful ever held in this town. It was a dream come true. To say she looked like an angel is not just a mother's pride. I can't describe the joy that was in her father's heart and mine.

When the newlyweds returned from their honeymoon, they calmly told us to expect a grandchild in about four or five months! That means our daughter was at least three months pregnant when she walked down the aisle. She must have known it at the time. How could she have done this to us? We loved this child more than life itself.

HURT AND DISAPPOINTED

DEAR HURT: The real test of love is to love our children when they need our love the most. It's easy to love them when they do everything right and make us proud of their accomplishments. But when they disappoint us (as children sometimes do) we can demonstrate our love by showing compassion, understanding, and forgiveness. Try it. You'll have fewer regrets.

Eight Held for Firebombing

NELSON (CP) — RCMP were holding eight persons Thursday night following what they described as an attempted firebombing of an orthodox Doukhobor member's home.

The incident occurred after Attorney-General Garde Gardom announced an investigation into recent arson and threats involving Doukhobors in southeastern B.C. communities.

Police said four men and four women were arrested outside the home of two members of the Union of Spiritual Commmunities of Christ (USCC) in Brilliant, 35 kilometres southwest of here, and eight containers of flammable liquid were seized.

No damage was done to the home of Larry and Ann Swetlikoff.

Co-Op Wins Sunk Barge Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Commonweath Insurance of Vancouver was ordered Thursday by the British Columbia Supreme Court to pay more than $890,000 to a native fishing co-operative in Bella Bella.

Justice Kenneth Fawcus ordered the payment to the Central Native Fishermen's Co-Operative for the loss in August of 1977 of a $35,000 barge carrying canned salmon to Vancouver.

Despite repairs, the barge took on water and began listing near Pine Island in the Queen Charlottes, spilling its load.

Commonwealth had argued that the barge wasn't seaworthy in the first place but Justice Fawcus rejected the argument, saying the co-op did what repairs a consultant considered were necessary.

Meier Out on $50,000 Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Meier, a former aide to the late billionaire recluse Howard Hughes, was released from prison in Burnaby, Thursday on $50,000 bail pending an appeal of his extradition order.

Two weeks ago, county court Judge Ray Paris ordered Meier extradited to the United States. He told Meier he believed there was enough evidence to warrent his return to Utah to face two counts of obstruction of justice through forgery.

In granting bail, Justice E. Davie Fulton of the British Columbia Supreme Court said that Meier had not been convicted of a crime.

John Taylor, Meier's lawyer, said earlier that he has asked the Federal Court of Canada to review the extradition order, and that if necessary he will take the issue to the federal cabinet.

Eloise Wilson Seeks Proof

BURNABY (CP) — A woman convicted of second-degree murder must ask the federal government to grant her a pass from the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre to search for a document she hopes will prove her innocence, her lawyer said Thursday.

Eloise Wilson has been attempting to get an escorted pass that would enable her to search the Vancouver Island home of her recluse mother for the document.

Her lawyer, Robert Gardiner, said prison spokesman Ted Harrison told him Wilson must write to federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde about the contents of the document and ask him to decide if it is important enough to justify the pass.

Gardiner said the document, if it exists, could help prove Ms. Wilson did not kill her elderly aunt in Vancouver three years ago.

Strychnine Probe Refused

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The provincial government will not investigate allegations that ranchers in the British Columbia Interior are using strychnine to kill wolves, Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday.

Mair dismissed rumors that a recent moratorium on the use of the poison 1080 has prompted ranchers to take things into their own hands to protect their livestock.

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

If you feel creative this may be your opportunity to finance your next trip. the International Youth Hostel Federation is looking for a new logo and they're going to pay $1,000 (U.S.) to the person who comes up with the best idea. But if you want to enter the competition work fast. They're accepting submissions only until Jan. 31, 1979. There are no restrictions on design or color but the size of your presentation must be 15 x 15 centimetres on stiff cardboard.

The logo chosen will be used to promote the International Youth Hostel Federation's 50th Anniversary in 1982. It will be used on badges, the international handbook and possibley even some national stamps.

If you think you've got a good idea submit your entry to your provincial office of the Canadian Hostelling association (CHA). From the provincial offices they will be forwarded to the head office in London where a decision will be made next spring.

Many young travellers think summer is the only time to take advantage of low cost accommodation at Canadian Youth Hostels. But that's not necessarily true. Although the majority of hostels are closed in the winter you can take advantage of a number of permanent hostels located in ski areas across the country.

Here are some of the programs planned for this winter:

The Quebec Hostelling Assoc., together with the Bolton Glen Hostel in the Eastern Laurentians will be organizing snow holiday packages every weekend between Dec. 15 and April 8.

These trips are available for $40 to members and $45 to non-members. What you get is minibus return transportation from Montreal, accommodation Friday and Saturday night and some meals. Ski and snowshoe equipement is available for rent.

The British Columbia region of the CHA, very active in the winter will be offering learn-to-cross-country ski weekends at both Whistler and Forbidden Plateau. the Whistler package costs $48 or $58 with rentals and for that you get two days of instruction, accommodation for one night and all meals. Transportation is extra, by car pool. Forbidden Plateau weekends are the same price but include an extra nights accommodation. Car pools are organized from Vancouver and Victoria.

Want to try a helicopter cross-country ski weekend? For $72 it's available to intermediate and advanced skiers at Whistler. You get two days of instruction, helicopter or S.T.O.L. aircraft transporatation, one night's accommodation and all meals. Your ground transport to Whistler is not included.

In Alberta there are 18 hostels available year-round and they range from primitive cabins halfway up a mountain to full-service facilities in urban and recreational locations. A new free pamphlet on Alberta hostelling facilities and services has just been published. It, and any other information, is available by contacting the Alberta Hostelling Assoc., 10926 - 88 Ave., Edmonton, Alta. T6G 0Z1. The newest and best recreational hostels are at Ribbon Creek, Bragg Creek and Whistler's, near Jasper townsite. Plans are in the works for organized excursions for cross-country skiers.

Surely this is the best buy in Victoria. Located one block off Glanford the house offers quietness yet is close to bus and schools. The 3 bedrooms and large kitchen with eating area are great for family living, the full basement is ready for further development (1½ baths already completed). This is a view lot from both front and back. Priced reduced to $62,-500. Don't let the low price mislead you — this is a fine modern home. Must be sold.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

Stan, Dorothy Thomas and Family wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our many relatives, friends and neighbours for their acts of kindness, expressions of sympathy, and many donations, cards and flowers at the time of our loss of our son/brother, George (Joe) Philip Thomas. Special thanks to Pauquachin Band, and Father Mudge.
Stan, Dorothy, and Family.

The Collins family wish to express their sincere thanks to the many friends and relatives of the late Monty Collins for their expressions of sympathy, many acts of kindness and for the beautiful floral arrangements received during this time of sorrow. A special thanks to Rev. G. Keenleyside who officiated at the service, and to Sands Funeral Chapel of Roses.

309 IN MEMORIAM

ALLISON — In loving memory of my dear husband Herbert, who passed away on December 22nd, 1968.
Lovingly remembered by his wife Pearl and family.

FLECK — In loving memory of my dear son Graham, who died December 22nd, 1971. Always in my thoughts - Mom

WOODS - In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandpa, William Woods who passed away December 22, 1977.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near.
Sadly missed by his loving wife Jean; sons Bill and Jim, daughters Valerie and Heather, and their families.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

MAC-BLO GRABS DOMTAR SHARES

Forest Giant Power Struggle

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., in a major corporate struggle to avoid takeover by Domtar Inc, announced today it has bought 20 per cent of Domtar's outstanding common shares and intends to gain full control of the Montreal-based company.

The move followed a bid by Domtar on Thursday to take over MacMillan Bloedel, the Vancouver-based forest giant.

The takeover battle sets up a confrontation between two of Canada's corporate giants and may create one of the world's largest forest products companies.

The Domtar shares are being purchased from Argus Corp. Ltd. and Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd.

As well, the Vancouver company said it will make an immediate offer of $28 a share to Domtar shareholders.

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. owns the largest block of Macmillan Bloedel stock, 13.4 per cent of the 21.2 million common shares, while Argus Corp. of Toronto has effective control of Domtar, holding 16.9 per cent of 14.8 million common shares.

Stuart Kerr, Domtar's vice-president of administration, said Thursday that MacMillan shareholders were to be be offered one Domtar share plus $3 for each common share of MacMillan stock.

In 1977, MacMillan Bloedel reported total revenue of $1.7 billion, compared with Domtar's $1 billion.

MacMillan Bloedel interests in logging, newsprint, and lumber are concentrated principally in British Columbia, although it also has holdings in New Brunswick and the United States.

About two-thirds of Domtar's revenues are derived from pulp and fine paper production in Eastern Canada, with the remainder coming from chemicals and building materials.

MacMillan Bloedel said in a statement it started discussions with Argus about 10 days ago "after a careful analysis of the benefits to shareholders which would accrue from a majority holding of Domtar."

"We intend to pursue vigorously the acquisition of Domtar shares," said company president Calvert Knudsen.

"The result will be to strengthen the national presence of our company and continue its momentum as the leader in the Canadian forest products industry."

With the announcement, trading of Domtar and MacMillan Bloedel shares was halted on Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges. Outstanding common Domtar

Mac-Blo B.C.'s Biggest

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. employs about 16,500 in B.C. and is the province's largest company.

Domtar, the other corporate giant engaged in the current take-over battle, is not as big a company, has little activity in B.C. and although engaged in the production and sale of pulp and paper is more diversified than Mac-Blo.

On Vancouver Island, Mac-Blo operates lumber mills at Chemainus, Harmac and Port Alberni; manufactures newsprint at Port Alberni, kraft at Port Alberni and Harmac and linerboard and shingles at Port Alberni.

The company also has logging operations at Shawnigan Lake, Chemainus, Northwest Bay, Port Alberni, Campbell River, Sayward and Port McNeill.

Mac-Blo manufactures about 1.6 billion feet of lumber a year, rolls out 1.15 million tons of newsprint and other papers and produces about 538,000 tons of kraft pulp in its world operations.

The company's sales for the nine months ending Sept. 30 were $1.5 billion, a record for that three-quarter period. Profit to Sept. 30 reached $73 million, amost doubling the 1977 nine-month total.

Domtar employs about 18,000 in all its operations compared to 24,000 for MacBlo.

Domtar is also diversified into roofing and paving materials, gypsum and lime products, treatment of timber with creosote and chemical manufacture.

Its B.C. operations, all in the Vancouver area, include a construction materials plant, as well as arborite and fine papers divisions.

The company has plants in other parts of Canada, the U.S., and Britain.

Girl Age 4 Beaten Up

Esquimalt police today said they are puzzled by a bizarre attack on a 4½-year-old girl early Thursday morning.

The incident has led to a 21-year-old man being charged with attempted murder.

Kenneth Andrew Burgess, of 1180 Colville, appeared in provincial court Thursday afternoon and was remanded in custody.

Police said the girl, Elizabeth Marie MacBon, is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Police said she was beaten on the head and neck in the bedroom of a suite in the 1180 Colville apartment block occupied by her mother, Brenda MacBon.

Police said an unsuccessful attempt was made to enter the mother's bedroom.

Police arrested the suspect minutes after the incident, which occurred at about 3 a.m.

Police said Mrs. MacBon had left the front door of the apartment unlocked to allow a girlfriend to come in.

Ontario Lawyers Miffed

Canadian Press

A number of Ontario lawyers expressed disappointment Thursday at the appointment of a British Columbia judge to the Supreme Court of Canada in place of an Ontario judge—a break with a 100-year-old tradition.

William Rogers McIntyre, 60, of the British Columbia Court of Appeals was appointed by the federal government to fill the vacancy opening on the court with the Dec. 29 resignation of Mr. Justice Wishart Spence, one of the traditional trio of Ontario representatives

W. H. Kidd, president of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association, said he had expected the traditional pattern of appointments to be followed.

By law, only Quebec is guaranteed three Supreme Court members. Ontario, however, always has had three members, the Atlantic regions one and Western Canada two.

Toronto lawyer Morris Manning said he was disappointed at the break in tradition "just because B.C. wants a spot on the court."

He said three Ontario judges "makes good sense, considering the population and the number of cases from Ontario that go before the Supreme Court."

Toronto lawyer Douglas Laidlaw, however, suggested that any appointment should be based on merit "and forget all about regional representation."

"This appointment was entirely political and I don't like it," he said.

In an August paper on constitutional reform then-justice minister Otto Lang referred to objections from British Columbia that the informal system of appointing Supreme Court justices resulted in no judge on the court from B.C. since 1962.

Barring unforeseen circumstances, said Lang, this normally would mean B.C. could not have a court member until the retirement of either Mr. Justice Ronald Martland (Alberta) or Mr. Justice Brian Dickson (Manitoba).

2ND FLQ PAIR HEADING HOME?

MONTREAL (CP) — Radio station CKAC says Jacques Lanctot and Marc Carbonneau, members of a terrorist cell accused of kidnapping British diplomat James Cross in 1970, are preparing to return to Montreal from exile in Paris.

Lanctot plans to return late in January and Carbonneau several weeks later, the radio station said, adding that the two former members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec have revealed their plans only to members of their families here.

Lanctot is the brother of Louise Cossette-Trudel, who returned last week from Paris with her husband Jacques and their two children. The Cossette-Trudels were arraigned in connection with the kidnapping and face preliminary hearings next Wednesday.

Members of the FLQ cell were allowed safe passage from Montreal to Cuba in 1970 in exchange for Cross's release, and left for Paris four years later.

Union - Gov't Scrap Over Robot Mailman

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. government is experimenting with electronic helpers to do routine chores now performed by civil servants.

The advantage of such "robots," to management is many-fold. They do not call in sick, take vacations, complain or join unions. They work night and day unless unplugged.

The Commerce Department has several delivering mail. But the current hassle comes from the U.S. Labor Department. It has a robot device, 24 inches wide, 58 inches long and 51 inches high. This tan, 700 pound, 3-wheeled machine (cost: $12,860) delivers and picks up mail. It runs on a magnetic track, beeping to tell where it is. At each office stop it chimes upon arrival and departure. It does not climb stairs or do windows.

Some Labor Department workers are not amused. They say it is especially ironic that some of the reports and memos the robot delivers concern the impact of automation on unemployment.

The labor union at the Labor Department (the American Federation of Government Employees) is upset bcause the robot (really a glorified filing cabinet) is doing its thing on the 3rd floor, where once a human being handled the mail cart.

Officials of the AFL-CIO union have protested that the robot was introduced or hired without consultation. While the union's contract with the department doesn't specifically cover negotiations over robots, it does include such items as staffing and job changes.

Labor Department brass say the robot-machine has been well-received generally. They point to a survey where 28 of its customers were polled. The result: 24 said the robot does nice work, 2 offices said it had no opinion and 2 said they preferred a human being.

PILOT'S FAMILY WINS INSURANCE FIGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Great West Life Assurance Co. was ordered Thursday to pay $70,000 to the family of a Kelowna man who died after a plane crash two years ago, even though the victim's insurance policy had an air-plane accident exclusion clause.

Justice Samuel Toy ordered the payment to the estate of David Chapman because the pilot was not killed in the accident itself.

Chapman's single-engine plane crashed near Hope Nov. 7, 1975, while on a flight to Kelowna from Vancouver. He left a note at the plane saying he would try walking out, even though he was dressed only in light clothes.

Searchers arrived two days later and began following the tracks when one RCMP officer slipped 30 feet into an icy stream. He would have died if he hadn't been able to chip footholds with a bayonet after his hunting knife broke.

Justice Toy ruled that Chapman likely died in a similar accident, although bits of his clothing were found.

Asbestos Dust Classroom Killer?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — "Millions of children" in public schools may be exposed to cancer-causing asbestos particles in the air of their classrooms, an environmental group charged Thursday.

The Environmental Defence Fund (EDF) said one out of every six schools could have possibly dangerous asbestos coatings.

And public schools are only the tip of the iceberg, the group said. Other public buildings, private schools, public and private universities and office buildings across the country were extensively sprayed with asbestos.

The EDF, an environmental group of 45,000 members, filed a petition with the Environmental Protection Agency demanding that agency identify all public schools where asbestos is a hazard and require asbestos manufacturers to make necessary repairs.

The petition will allow the fund to go to court in 90 days to try to force the government to act.

The National Education Association, the National Parent and Teachers Association and the Americn Federation of Teachers also called for immediate action.

"Potentially millions of children in thousands of public schools across the country are needlessly being subjected to a cancer risk of unknown magnitude," EDF lawyer Bob Rauch told a press conference Thursday.

"While the full extent of the problem remains unknown, the evidence to date shows that in many schools children are being exposed to levels of asbestos far in excess of those in ambient air and equal to levels associated with an increased risk of cancer."

Children are particularly vulnerable to asbestos effects because they breathe more air and have a longer life span to develop slow-growing cancers, Rauch said.

The most significant hazards occur during routine building maintenance, such as repairing electrical fixtures. When the asbestos is cut, the dust and flakes get into the air and are recycled continually.

Fund scientist Joseph Highland said, "If I were a parent who observed the ceiling flaking, I would keep my children out of school."

The EDF said slightly more than 6,000 of the 87,000-plus public schools across the country have been inspected for asbestos contamination. Of those, close to 1,000 were found to

Full Reports Requested On School Maintenance Woes

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria principals have been asked to prepare detailed reports of maintenance problems in their schools.

Superintendent Allan Stables has requested the submissions in his investigation of an alleged connection between staff layoffs this year and a noticeable drop in maintenance levels.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal said Thursday Stables knows upkeep in schools isn't what it was a year ago.

Stables was in Vancouver today and unavailable for comment.

Stavdal said Stables has heard complaints from parents and principals that staff cutbacks are causing the deterioration.

The board cut 57 non-teaching positions because it felt the district was overstaffed.

The layoffs in January and June affected members of Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) local 382 (custodians and trades people) and local 947 (clerical staff).

The district has increased contracting out this year to cut costs.

Stables was surprised when confronted with a list of specific complaints including rat and termite problems, Stavdal said.

The list was submitted in a letter to the board by the Confederation of Parents Associations of Victoria (CPAV).

CPAV president Marilyn Berry singled out deterioration at Colquitz, termites at McKenzie and a leaky roof at Willows as the most serious problems.

Stavdal said administrators are aware Colquitz is in "shabby condition" and preparations are being made to rectify the situation.

Professional exterminators were at McKenzie on Thursday getting rid of the termites, and tenders have been called for a new roof for Willows, he said.

CUPE Local 382 president Tom Cooper said serious deterioration in schools is the result of continuing cuts to the maintenance budget in recent years.

Cooper, a custodian at George Jay, said the administration knows about the problem but is reluctant to act.

School trustees seldom bother to investigate the effects their cutbacks have on the operation of the schools, Cooper said.

"We had one of the best systems in Canada as far as school maintenance and upkeep of property is concerned," Cooper said.

But deterioration has been steady and in a few years schools will cost the taxpayers a fortune to repair, he said.

He applauded the efforts of the CPAV to confront school officials with the problem.

Maintenance workers have been pointing out the problems for some time with little effect, he said.

Requisitions for repairs sometimes sit around for a couple of years before anything is done, Cooper said.

Willows custodian Bob Cunningham said the leaky roof at the school has been destroying tiles.

Top maintenance and management people have been around to look at the problem three times, but so far nothing has been done. Now the school needs a new roof, he said.

Cunningham said he just keeps putting more buckets on the floor to catch the drips.

First-Class Mail, Via Cobble Hill

So you're wondering why it takes so long for the mail to get across town these days?

Maybe it's because of a unique postal delivery system.

In any case, Mr. and Mrs. M. Mueller of Calgary will get their Christmas card from Mr. and Mrs. Jens Koepke of Edmonton a little late this year.

It ended up in a Cobble Hill mailbox with uncancelled first-class postage and full postal codes attached.

Which leaves one burning question. Which Canadian city are they routing Victoria mail through?

And ask Harold Jackson what he thinks of automated post offices. He'll likely reply, Bah, Humbug!

With good reason considering the state of a Christmas card which was delivered this week to his 101-year-old mother, Sarah Jackson, a resident in the Gorge Hospital.

The card, which was sent by his cousin, Hilda Barnes, of Victoria, arrived looking as if it had been savaged by a wild dog.

The post office had stamped on the envelope — in French and English — that the letter had been damaged by mechanical equipment.

"Never used to have that sort of thing when people did the sorting," mutters Jackson.

Last year 11 brave souls from the ship were joined by one man from CFB Esquimalt for the initial dunking.

This year Sub.-Lt. Bob Marsh of Kootenay says at least 30 of his shipmates intend to take part.

The ship has issued a challenge to all ships of the western command and military units. A trophy will go to the group with the most swimmers.

Not all birds go south for the winter.

Some go east, some go west and some, believe it or not, just go round in circles.

Golden Plovers flutter 2,000 miles across the Pacific to Hawaii from the Aleutian Islands, California gulls, which nest in Saskatchewan, come to the coast (just like prairie farmers) and Sooty Shearwaters leave Australia and New Zealand and fly around in circles in the Pacific.

Former B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson completed the last leg of a 17-day Hawaii-to-Victoria voyage by road when he drove back to Victoria after bringing the yacht Annie Cadby through stormy seas into Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The Annie Cadby, owned by Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm, lost a mast during the Victoria to Maui race last July. Anderson flew to Hawaii last month to skipper the yacht on the return trip.

The crew of four encountered rough weather as soon as they entered Juan de Fuca Strait, and sought shelter in Bamfield.

And All the Best, Sir! Whoever You Are

Even though he chose to advertise the event in the Sidney Review rather than in this newspaper, we would like to extend our warmest congratulations to Lt.-Col. James Brown-Hardinge (Retd.) on his forthcoming marriage to his cousin, Miss Amanda Wentworth, "a woman of excellent quality and parts."

For the benefit of the few readers who may not know the name, we should explain that the colonel is one of the Saanich Peninsula's lovably crusty old curmudgeons — a splendid example of that all-but-extinct breed of officer and gentleman who served King and Country in various far-flung outposts of Empire.

His cantankerous letters to The Review over the years have evoked memories of the glorious days of the British Raj, of big game hunting exploits, of innumerable pink gins served by turbaned bearers under whirring fans or slowly flapping punkahs.

In one of his more memorable letters, which caused a bit of a furore among the peninsula's animal lovers, he suggested a drastic solution to the problem of garden damage caused by roaming deer: digging large pits to catch them, as tigers were once trapped in Poona.

Some churlish people have suggested the colonel is too preposterous to be real; that he is nothing more than a figment of the Review's imagination.

But we (who also believe fervently in the existence of Bigfoot, Nessie, Cadborosaurus and other assorted monsters) incline to the opposite view.

To all doubters we would say, at this festive time of year: Yes, Virginia, there is a Brown-Hardinge (Retd.)

Sharp Drop In Cheats, UIC Claims

Stiffer UIC controls have reduced cheating to almost nil in Victoria, according to a survey by the local Canada Employment Centre.

During the October postal dispute, 7,500 cheques were handed out from the Bay Street Armoury and 365 cheques were unclaimed.

On previous occasions, most of these 365 would have turned out to be people who are in California or Hawaii on holidays and not entitled to UIC benefits.

However, this time only 11 of the 365 people were violating the rules and were cut off from benefits.

"This is a surprisingly low number," said Wally Pickering CEC manager here.

Pickering said it is pleasant to find so much honesty in Victoria, especially at this season when people need money.

The answer may be that more people are aware the UIC control program is becoming increasingly more efficient and therefore it is more difficult to beat the system.

"More employers are filing regular reports and we are checking these through our computer. If there are any discrepancies, we will detect them right away."

Pickering said a postal strike, while inconvenient, provided a good opportunity to monitor the honesty of people making claims.

But in the dispute two months ago, almost all of the 365 who failed to show up for their cheques had good reasons for doing so.

Many explained they expected the strike to end quickly and decided to wait for the mail service to be restored. An investigation showed that these people were entitled to the benefits they were claiming.

Pickering also released figures showing the local economy in November was stronger than at the same time last year.

Only 8,988 Victorians were registered as looking for work, down from 11,000 at the same time last year.

There were 570 people placed in jobs during November, up from 514 the previous November.

In addition, there have been 47 people hired under a federal Tax Credit program and 150 young people hired through Job Experience and Training. Both are subsidized by the federal government.

The local CEC has established the Pacific region's first upgrading course in carpentry through federal funding. About 16 local carpenters are beginning a course at Camosun under the program.

Pavilion Patient Burned

A 63-year-old patient at Memorial Pavilion suffered extensive burns to his body Thursday when ashes from his cigarette ignited his clothing.

James Pattullo is listed in stable condition today in the burns unit of Victoria General Hospital.

A spokesman for the pavilion said Pattullo had asked a nurse if he could smoke and while she was away getting a fireproof smoking blanket he apparently lit up.

When she returned Pattullo was sitting in his wheelchair in the bathroom with his clothing on fire.

Another Gale Causes Outages

Wind gusting to 60 knots thrashed Greater Victoria overnight and caused power outages from Langford to Sooke.

The second windstorm in a week — third big storm this season — brought tree branches down throughout the area

Broken hydro lines and shorted transformers were reported in parts of Langford and Metchosin and the Sooke-Saseenos district was blacked out for about an hour at midnight.

Some circuits were still being restored this morning.

Ald. Larry Ryan said today the B.C. Forests Products plant on Gorge Road is a fire hazard the city will have to live with.

Ryan said after touring the operation with Chief Eric Simmons this week he is convinced the plant operators are doing everything they can to minimize the hazard.

"Given the nature of the operation, everything that can be done is being done," said Ryan.

He said that sawmills and pulp mills are always hazardous and the only recourse the fire department has is to keep a watchful eye and see that all safety precautions are taken.

"The ultimate solution, which is not practical, is to close it down completely . . . we have to remember there's a lot of jobs at stake here."

Ryan, new chairman of council's fire safety committee, said he is impressed with the state of readiness exhibited by BCFP fire crews.

He also said he believes the company is using the safest technology available.

The Victoria fire department has been called to the Gorge Road plant 18 times this year, but often was there simply as back-up to the BCFP fire suppression crews.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. How about some information on Gary Coleman, who plays Arnold Jackson in "Different Strokes?" Wasn't he that funny little kid who appeared on a somewhat regular basis in the equally funny "America 2-Night?" — G.F. Chapsville, Penn.

A. Gary Coleman is 10 years old and gives the appearance he's been around the acting business since birth. He's a very funny person, not kid funny but just plain funny, funny.

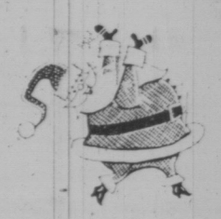
Gary, the only child of Willie and Sue Coleman, started acting in television commercials at the age of 6. He was born Feb. 8, 1968 in Zion, Ill., where he still resides.

In addition to acting, he is interested in astronomy, space, aircraft and books. He not only reads books but he writes them, too, and even illustrates them with his own drawings. He also liks to play a little golf now and then.

When he's not acting, reading, studying or writing mystery stories about lost hamsters, he is active with his hobby, a collection of miniature electric trains.

His brief television career has included appearances in "The Edge of Night," "The Jeffersons," "Good Times" and "America 2-Night." It was appearances in this latter program that caught the eye of NBC officials, who cast him for the role in "Different Strokes."

The fifth grader resides with his mother in a Hollywood, Calif., apartment when NBC is taping the show.



Q. Could you tell me if Jack Soo, who plays Nick in "The Barney Miller Show," at one time had a singing career? Could he have been the singer Jack Soo who was featured at the Tropics in Youngstown, Ohio, during the summer of 1945? — G.Z. Warren, Ohio.

A. Although efforts to obtain an answer directly from Jack Soo have been unsuccessful, a spokesperson for the cast of "The Barney Miller Show" said that at one time Soo pursued a singing career and performed in night clubs during the mid-1940s. However, the spokesperson could not confirm if Soo performed at the Tropics.

Q. I'd like to know where I can write to Robin Williams of "Mork and Mindy?" — D.M. Livermore, Calif.

A. I suggest you write in care of Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038.

Q. You recently provided a rundown on Herman Wedemeyer of "Hawaii Five-0" and mentioned his football background. This couldn't be the same "Squirming Herman" who was a famous halfback at St. Mary's College in Calif., during the early 1940s? — K.S. Sun City, Ariz.

A. Sports writers in the San Francisco Bay area named Herman Wedemeyer, better known today as Duke in "Hawaii Five-0," as the "Squirming Herman" after his dazzling display of football ability. He was also known as the "Galloping Gael."

Q. Our local PBS station recently aired a British series named "The Prisoner," starring Patrick McGoohan. I was stationed near London when the series originally appeared on television and was delighted to see it surface here in the U.S. I'd like to know how I can contact McGoohan because I have an unresolved question about the show. Specifically, who were the people who captured him and what country did they represent? — S.W. Morris Plain, N.J.

A. McGoohan says the show never mentioned who were the people keeping everyone prisoners and why. He says the main point of "The Prisoner" was to demonstrate what could happen in a society where a "Big Brother Society" watches and listens to everything people do, where people's identities and personalities are reduced to numbers and where freedom is denied to everyone.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, Copley Syndicate, in care of this newspaper.

LOVE OF LIFE 'partners' part briefly: Lloyd Battista (he's Ray Slater) will spend Christmas in Maryland; Birgitta Tolksdorf (she's Arlene Slater, Ray's wife) will stay in new York and add to the shine of the Big Apple during the holiday season.

Soap Opera Scene

O Come All Ye Soap Stars

By JOHN GOUDAS

The Christmas season is upon us but there is little to be cheerful about in the bleak lives of many of the soap opera characters' lives. However, in real life, the various stars are going ahead with their plans to enjoy the holiday season in a variety of ways.

Mary Stuart, unofficially known as the Queen of Soaps (she's Joanne Vincente in Search for Tomorrow), plans a traditional Christmas celebration. Mary holds an annual Christmas Eve party for her friends and their children, at which she serves a sumptuous feast of turkey and ham with all the trimmings. Everyone exchanges Christmas presents; and, later, guitars are taken from their cases and the assembled raise their voices in four-part harmony for hours of caroling.

Lloyd Battista (he's Ray Slater in Love of Life) is going to be in Maryland where he'll spend Christmas with his mother. Birgitta Tolksdorf (she's Ray's wife Arlene in Love of Life), faithful to the core, will pass the yuletide season in the Big Apple.

Don Stewart (Mike Bauer in Guiding Light) enjoys taking his wife and family to Sarasota, Fla., where they spend the holiday time with Don's parents. However, with Don's busy schedule, the Stewarts can't make reservations in advance so he has found a ready solution to the problem. As soon as he finishes work, Don meets his family at a private airport and revs up his twin-engined Cessna 340-A and wings down to Florida for a visit with the folks.

Margo McKenna (Betsy Crawford Lang in Love of Life) is very excited since this is her baby's first Christmas and both her parents and her husband Skipper's parents will be with them to make it a perfect family holiday. Ted Leplat (Margo's TV husband, Elliott Lang, in Love of Life) plans a festive time with his lady love, Jill Andre. They'll take in a lot of theatre, exchange gifts, have lovely dinners and just enjoy the marvels of New York at Christmastime.

Ruth Warrick (Phoebe Tyler in All My Children) will be visiting her children in Vermont and Colorado (one place for Christmas and the other for New Year's).

Rick Weber (Dr. Tom Crawford in Love of Life) is very excited about this Christmas since his 11-year-old daughter Lori will be coming from California to spend the holidays with her dad. Rick said they will try to sandwich in a skiing excursion during the time off.

Eileen Fulton (Lisa Coleman in As the World Turns) doesn't forget her faithful following during the Christmas season. For seven years, her fan club has been simply marvelous to the soap star, and Eileen has found a small but thoughtful way of repaying them for their devotion. She saves the rose petals from the blooms of her enormous rose garden and in the fall makes little sachets, filling them with the scented petals. All her fans receive one, and in this way, Eileen hopes that they will have a little bit of spring all the year round.

PLOT PORTENTS. Bob Anderson may be an invalid, but he senses uneasiness in Linda on Days of Our Lives. While Linda is more careful, Neil grows bolder, ready to throw caution to the winds in their affair. Marlena must tread lightly with Don over Donna's pregnancy. After being away for a spell, Jeri resumes her penchant for blundering, even to the point of antagonizing David.

With the New Year approaching, Liz contemplates life with Stuart Brooks on The Young and the Restless. Going by past performance, Liz is slated for disappointment. But Vanessa expects a banner 1979 minus her veil, and intends to have her say in the family busines. Kay continues to improve and must scheme to hold Derek, who thinks of Jill often.

Raven and Logan are going to have a baby in Edge of Night. Mike gets a wonderful Christmas present and Miles comes up with an idea which may pave the way to spring April.

Maeve concocts a plan give Delia a healthy dose of the taste of motherhood in Ryan's Hope. Theresa is driving Tom to make a drastic decision involving dangerous surgery.

Everyone is fingerprinted and a lot of lies are thrown around during the Marco Dane murder investigation on One Life to Live. Edwina has a new job and goes at it with a vengeance. Greg is arrested but released when the evidence points elsewhere.

Ray Gardner is on the loose once again in All My Children. Paul Martin goes to Llanview and the Tempo article comes out and it devastates Erica.

Catherine the Great addresses her subjects (left) and the young lovers Oksana and Vakula the blacksmith (right), celebrate the coming of Christmas with a joyous carol in these two scenes from Nicolai Rimsky-Korsakov's opera Christmas Eve airing Monday, Dec. 25, at 10 p.m. on Channel 9.

Rimsky-Korsakov's Opera

Premiere for 'Christmas Eve'

The American premiere of Nicolai Rimsky-Korsakov's opera Christmas Eve will be presented on Channel 9 Monday, December 25, at 10 p.m. Taped in December 1977 during a live performance at the Indiana University Musical Arts Center in Bloomington, Indiana, the opera, sung in English, is performed by the Indiana University Opera Theatre.

Christmas Eve, composed in 1895, typifies Rimsky-Korsakov's love of the fantastic and naively humorous. Set in the Ukraine during the reign of Catherine the Great, Christmas Eve tells of a village blacksmith's quest for a pair of jeweled slippers for his sweetheart. To get them takes the help of the Devil, a wild Christmas Eve ride through the heavens, and a visit with the Tsaritsa herself.

In his review of the production, Opera News' William Mootz praises stars Julia Conwell and Bernard Lowe and says, "The score shimmers and glows . . . the opera is an utterly beguiling piece of musical theatre."

The sets for Christmas Eve, which range from a rustic snow-covered village to the resplendent imperial palace of St. Petersburg, were created by Max Rothlisberger, who also designed the Italian and Swiss premiers of the work.

The musical director is Bryan Balkwill, who has held numerous conducting posts in North America and Europe, including Glyndbourne, Covent Garden, and Sadler's Wells in England.

Throughout its 30-year history, the Indiana University Opera Theatre has presented nearly a thousand performances of fully-staged operas. Eight operas are presented each season in the company's home, the Musical Arts Centre, one of the world's largest and best-equipped opera facilities.

Christmas Eve is a production of WTIU, Bloomington, Indiana. The opera was directed for the stage by Ross Allen and directed for television by Mickey Klein. It was produced by Herbert Seltz. The production was underwriten in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Nice long letter from M. C. Rawn of Toronto who collects postcards. In Canada this is a major collectible still in the making. In the United States it is very popular hobby and there is even a name for it — detiology. Like postage stamps there is a great number of possible specialties within the hobby, starting with the most obvious — and most fascinating — postcards of one's own town. Most picture postcards faithfully record the places depicted on them, and the changes that take place.

Something which fascinates me about collecting is the time factor. Readers will detect an occasional irascible note when I am talking about trading for profit; it seems so much more sensible to me to keep things for a far greater length of time than most people visualize. Any of our senior citizens whose grandparents lived in Canada can personally encompass virtually the whole of our history. But it does not end there. Montreal is about 350 years old. Antique by Canadian standards, but eventually, if we don't do something silly, it will be 1350 years old and very likely 3350 years old. Much the same is true of Lethbridge, Victoria, London, St. Catharines, Toronto and Vancouver.

How would you like to own right now a picture postcard of Main Street, Athens, as it was in the time of Socrates? A 2500 year old postcard? Absurd? Not really. When I suggest sometimes that we should stash mementoes away for our great grandchildren I do so in the fervent hope that they too will pass them on to their great grandchildren and so on down vast corridors of time.

Picture postcards tell the story of history. They should not be treated as currency.

Rawn collects Main Street views and aerial views of small towns thoughout the English speaking world. He has masses of cards he would love to trade — people, place, things and events. "I do not sell for gain, he says, that would take all the fun out of it. I pay 20-30¢ for the cards I buy and that is what I sell them for. The most I ever paid for a card was $5. for one of the S. S. Titanic, printed in 1912. I'd love to hear from other Canadian collectors."

So why not drop him a line. His address is 10 McNairn Ave., Apt. C-2, Toronto, Ontario, M5M 2H5.

F. C. Rice of Vancouver asks how to tell genuine cut glass from pressed glass.

Proceed with great caution. Generally the authentic article is recognizable by the sharpness of the cut edges and the equal sharpness of the points of the V-cuts. Pressed glass and imitation cut glass can be identified by more or less rounded edges. This is far less than 100 per cent reliable and depends very much on how new the mould was.

Weight is another factor. Cut glass was usually lead or flint and significantly heavy.

Close examination of real cut glass may show a maker's mark on the inside bottom. It will have been made with a tiny rubber stamp dipped in etching acid. You will need VERY good eyes.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K0.

COUNTRY TALES

Country Tales, a delightful 30-minute film starring Tony Robinson, will be presented on Channel 9, Wednesday, Dec. 27, at 8:30 p.m. (rebroadcast Sunday, Dec. 31, at 7:30 p.m.).

The film revolves around a monastery misfit, Brother Humphrey. Although allowed to talk for only half an hour a day, he has managed to become the Abbey bore — the monk to be avoided during those precious 30 minutes.

While Brother Humphrey is sitting under a tree one day, bits of bread fall from the sky; the Monk assumes that this is a "sign from the Heavens" that God has chosen him to feed the masses — and he says so.

Looking At Stars

NBC is going ahead with a series making visible, at last, "Mrs. Colombo," whose off-screen guesses aided her husband before Peter Falk exited as TV's most beloved sleuth. However, Brenda Vaccaro, mentioned as the first choice, has chosen to take her talents elsewhere. She will be playing a detective comes the new season . . . but on CBS.

Kate Mulgrew gets the "Mrs. Columbo" star spot making this the big break that's been predicted for her since she first surfaced in the daytime soap, "Ryan's Hope."

Ah, justice. It seems some is due Kreskin, the mentalist seen so often on TV. Yes it's true, as we reported, that he can't remember his social security number. But, he says, if somebody in an audience were to hold the card, then he could use his ESP, or whatever, and spout out the digits correctly.

The Smithsonian Institution's unmatched collection of aircraft and spacecraft in the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., serves as the inspiration for A PLACE OF DREAMS, a one-hour special hosted by Cliff Robertson, to be shown on Channel 9, Thursday, Dec. 28, at 8 p.m.

Utilizing vintage photographs, early newsfilm of flight's pioneers, displays from the National Air and Space Museum's many exhibit halls, and close-up examinations of the museum's collection of aircraft and spacecraft, A PLACE OF DREAMS is both a history of modern flight and a celebration of the remarkable two-and-a-half year old National Air and Space Museum, believed to be the world's most popular museum.

Host Cliff Robertson, himself a pilot and aircraft owner describes the spiritand accomplishments of Orville and Wilbur Wright, Charles Lindbergh, Amelia Earhart, Werner Von Braun, and the moon astronauts, as well as others such as Oakley Kelly and John Macready, Wiley Post, Robert Goddard, Samuel Pierpont Langley, Donald Douglas, and Jack Northrop.

Marlo Thomas stars in the ABC movie, It Happened One Christmas, which will be shown on Channel 4 Sunday, Dec. 24 at 9 p.m.

IT HAPPENED ONE CHRISTMAS

"It Happened One Christmas," starring Mario Thomas, will return for an encore showing on ABC this Christmas Eve.

The movie became an instant holiday classic when it attracted the largest audience of any television movie on the air last year. It will air as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Dec. 24, at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

Marlo Thomas stars as Mary Bailey Hatch in the story of a remarkable young woman and a lovable apprentice angel who team up to make a miracle that has every right to become a yearly classic. Even the most cynical will be hard put not to be caught up in the spirit of love that colors this film. Miss Thomas, who has never looked lovelier nor acted with more grace, is completely believable as the girl whose dreams are deferred."

In the story, it is Christmas Eve. Snow sparkles from the Bedford Falls church steeple as the joyful townspeople bustle home with gifts for the holiday.

THREATENED

But Mary has been threatened with financial ruin by the crusty Mr. Potter.

He has ordered a surprise audit of the Bailey Building and Loan, the last bastion of financial independence for the townspeople from the merciless banker.

Despondent and fearing the demise of her town, Mary is visited by guardian angel, Clara Oddbody, Angel Second Class, who gives her a most precious gift: a startling look at what the world would be like without Mary Bailey Hatch

OTHER STARS

Costarring in "It Happened One Christmas," are: Barney Martin as Uncle Willie, Archie Hahn as Ernie, Chris Guest as Harry Bailey and Lynn Woodlock as 12-year-old Mary.

Marlo Thomas and Carole Hart co-produced "It Happened One Christmas," for Daisy Productions. Donald Wrye directed the screenplay by Lionel Chetwynd.

ORSON WELLES

Also starring are Orson Welles as the greedy banker, Mr. Potter; Cloris Leachman as the angel and Wayne Rogers as George Hatch, Mary's devoted husband, the father of their children and her business partner.

Brandon Stoddard, vice president in charge of ABC's TV movies, said, in announcing the encore showing, "'It Happened One Christmas' is a holiday gift wrapped in the loving care that creates a classic. This gentle film glows with the warmth of a Yule log, and it seems most appropriate to present it this year on Christmas Eve."

"GREAT FILM"

Critic John Voorhes of the Seattle Times, reflecting much of the national response to the film's premiere showing, called the movie "a lovely piece of filmmaking, a TV movie

Looking At Stars

Alexis Smith, currently the toast of Broadway in the musical "Platinum," has been married for 34 years to Craig Stevens, a frequent television guest star this season and forever remembered as "Peter Gunn."

During the long years of her stately-lady movie stardom only he and she knew she was also an agile dancer yearning to kick up her heels. But his inside knowledge of the vagaries of show biz reinforced her own healthy philosophy that if you don't get the job you want, you do something else. For her, the first of the "right" jobs came along half-a-dozen years ago with "Follies," which won her a Tony Award.

Gene Barry's wife Betty was a musical comedy actress of great promise, he fondly recalls, before he made his first hit in the musical, "Rosalinda." She didn't choose to resume her career until her sons were grown and then only because Gene urged her to co-star as his Golda in a production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Compact Country-style Home

Here's a charmingly rustic design which possesses all the modern conveniences necessary to an urban lifestyle and which would make an appealing town home for the smaller family with a narrow frontage building lot. The vertical channel siding and stone veneer and chimney of the exterior are complemented by the country-style accents on the dining room widnow and the single garage door.

The wide weather-protected entrance leads into a compact reception foyer which faces the staircase down to the family and reception area of the lower level or up to the main living area of the home. The main landing leads naturally right into the large convivial living room, which features a centrally-positioned fireplace and excellent natural lighting.

The large L-shaped kitchen/nook combination has generous counter work area and the casual nook area invites the installation of custom-built breakfast nook furnishings. Convenient pocket doors separate the kitchen/nook from the main hallway and the large formal dining room. Access to this latter from the kitchen is direct, yet separation of formal and casual dining is still maintained.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage area and all have excellent natural lighting and generous closet storage. The large master bedroom has full-width closets behind louvered bi-fold doors and a three-piece ensuite with tub and a window for gentle natural light in the morning.

The lower level contains the family recreation room, depending upon family requirements and preferences, and space for the future development of additional bedrooms or further recreational facilities.

A single enclosed garage, with space for the installation of a workbench for the maintenance-minded handyman, completes the convenience features of this practical and attractive design.

Plans for design No. 78-1340 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70, for the first set and $10, for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100, and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $1. for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 5 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series No. 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, Victoria Press, 382 Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

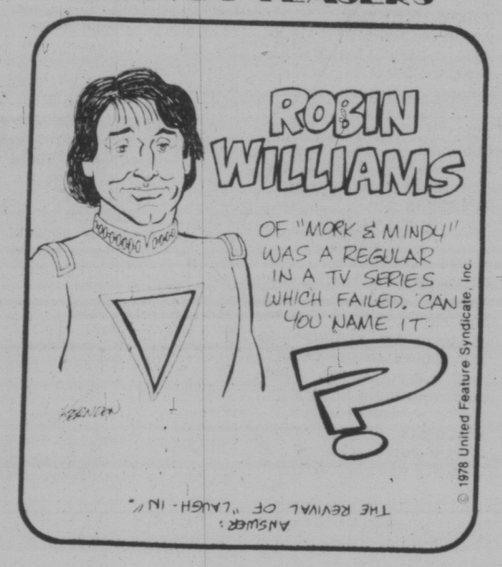
TRIVIA TEASERS



With each passing year the Christmas season becomes more commercialized, more hectic, more tension-filled. Every December I vow never again to become a party to the distasteful universal jamboree of giving and getting but, annually, I become a victim of the pervasive atmosphere, and break my vow — at least to the extent of compiling a list of gift-book suggestions, as I did last week.

My excuse, I keep telling myself, is that my mission in life is to persuade more people to read better books, and that Christmas is the time to bait the hook, for it is then that one encounters unfamiliar faces in bookstores, places they wouldn't dream of entering at any other time.

There's nothing cynical about this view; it's a fact. One local alderman (who shall remain blessedly anonymous) remarked, after a recent debate on the current Public Library issue, that his thing was sports but "I've got nothing against book-learning people." He just stopped short of adding, "But I wouldn't want my sister to marry one." Such people, who live in a perpetual state of non-grace, are to be observed slinking in and out of bookstores at Christmastime, and the hope is always that when they find that reading is painless, and even enjoyable, they may become hooked.

For these types, as well as for my regular readers, I had considered briefly discussing half-a-dozen or so new books as a further aid to Christmas shoppers, but this kind of breathless, last-minute treatment smacks of super-market tactics and is no way to treat books. Instead, I'm going to devote the remainder of this column to the man whose name is most closely linked to the secular aspect of Christmas: Charles Dickens.

Commercial

I'm thinking in particular of A Christmas Carol, which a lot of families make a practice of re-reading at this time of year. The story of old Scrooge's conversion from a curmudgeon to an affable philanthropist has stirred everyone's imagination since it was first published in 1843; I wonder how many know the story behind the story.

Most great books go in and out of fashion but A Christmas Carol has been read, loved and treasured in every literate home for four generations. Success was immediate. The critic Francis Jeffrey vowed that the book had done more good than all the pulpits of Christendom, and even Dickens' rival Thackeray admitted that he would have given a fortune to have written it.

Dickens was more emotionally involved with this work than at any other time, except perhaps later with David Copperfield, when he forced himself to relive his wretched childhood. And yet A Christmas Carol was the one that started out as a purely commercial enterprise, conceived with haste rather than heart.

In 1841, Dickens had been writing with astonishing energy and fantastic success for eight years. The Old Curiousity Shop and Barnaby Rudge had both appeared in weekly serial form within a single year. The man was understandably very tired and needed a break. His idea was to rest, read, travel, spend time with his family, and plan lectures for his first visit to the United States.

Assuming that Barnaby Rudge would be as successful as Mr. Pickwick, Oliver Twist, Nicholas Nickleby, and that saccharine favorite of the Victorians, Little Nell, his publishers agreed to a year's leave with pay: £150 a month until he started a new novel in 1842, and £200 a month during its week-by-week publication.

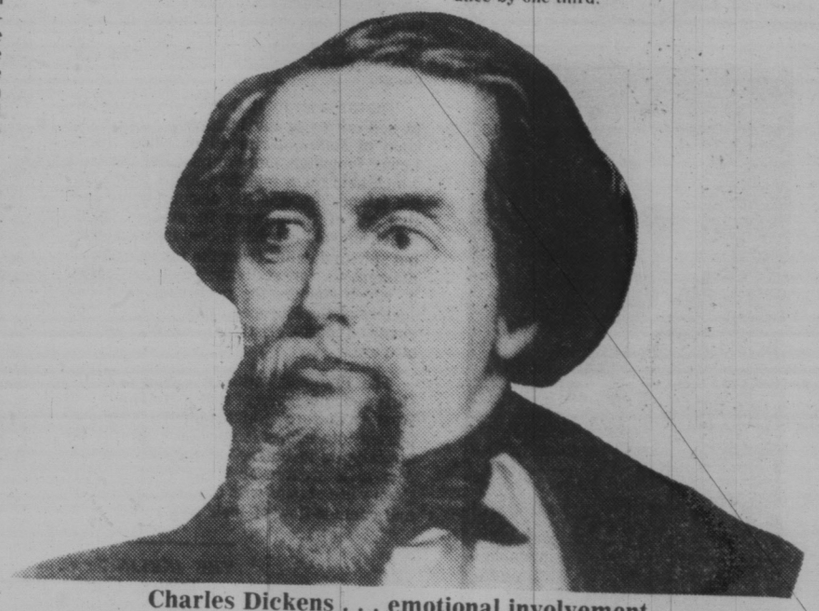
By 1843, he had visited America, and also started the novel, The Life and Adventures of Martin Chuzzlewit. The rest of the plan had turned sour, and Dickens, the 19th century's most successful author, was also the most worried.

His long holiday had cost more than anticipated; upkeep of his large London house was crippling; he now had a wife and five children to support; his blood-sucking parents and brothers were leeching him as usual; and with Barnaby Rudge and Martin Chuzzlewit not selling well, his publishers, threatened to cut his monthly allowance by one third.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

The story behind the story Of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol

'Mr. Fezziwig's Ball' by John Leech for A Christmas Carol



Charles Dickens . . . emotional involvement

Dickens, angry and desperate for money, decided to dash off what we would call a pot-boiler. It had to have December publication, and it had to be a certain seller. He began to write in the middle of October and completed the story by the end of November. And so, out of the very need and greed the story decried, A Christmas Carol was born.

The plot of the Carol, including Tiny Tim, was lifted almost bodily out of Mr. Wardle's tale in Pickwick of Gabriel Grub the sexton, "an ill-conditioned cross-grained surly fellow . . . who consorted with nobody but himself and an old wicker bottle."

You'll recall how Grub, while digging a grave on Christmas Eve, is carried off by goblins who show him, among other scenes, a poor and loving family, and the little attic room, where the death of the youngest child leaves Grub a changed man. Even the title for the new version was lifted from Wardle's song at the party.

Painstaking

Dickens started the book as a cold-blooded, money-making venture, but before he'd finished he was writing in a white heat of emotion, completely involved. Financially, the book was a failure and solved none of Dickens' money problems, but it brought him what he most needed: Acclaim and love and emotional involvement with his story and its readers. The Carol altered his own nature for he found himself believing in the moral as he gave it life. And it changed his world image by linking him forever indissoluably with Christmas.

Many critics have labelled the plot of A Christmas Carol childish and the writing careless. It may be childish — like the plot of the Nativity — but careless, no. I have seen the original manuscript and I possess a facsimile copy with the printed text of the first edition on facing pages. The facsimile pages show how painstakingly it was rewritten and corrected.

Looking over the author's shoulder, as it were, we can see the process of creation, with false starts and trial runs, and a finished manuscript that is so obscure and "dirty" that no modern compositor could tackle it, or be willing to try.

On the very first page he strayed into a digression on Hamlet, and then wisely decided to delete it as irrelevant. On page 36 Scrooge's clerk gradually assumed the name Bob Crachit, but you can sense the struggle in the interlineations. On the next page the Ghost's prediction that Tiny Tim will die was deleted, because Dickens found a more effective place for this on page 39. These are examples of what the facsimile of the manuscript reveals; they certainly give the lie to the charge of carelessness.

A Christmas Carol, written in six weeks, and for the basest of reasons, has been called, not extravagantly, "the greatest little book in the world." It changed not only Dickens' own nature but the world's attitude to Christmas. The vague, angelic command of Goodwill To All Men became a practical earthly possibilty, and the once purely religious festival became (regrettably, many think) a universal orgy of gift-exchanges and over-eating. Even the language of the English-speaking world annually reflects the impact made by "the greatest little book in the world."

When we wish one another "Merry Christmas!" we are merely quoting Charles Dickens.

The 'Spiritual Exiles' Who Got Together For Talk, Support

By JULIAN REID

Almost a half-century ago, a select little fellowship of Oxford dons and dreamers began gathering around the engaging presence of C. S. Lewis, a man whose gift for friendship was every bit the equal of his many other talents. Sometime in the mid-1930's they took to referring to themselves, more in jest than in earnest, as "the Inklings." But they never comprised a formal association, let alone a self-conscious literary coterie — they were merely a small band of brother spirits who revelled in each other's conversation and company.

And yet, despite the casual nature of their gatherings, their memory has endured.

Superficially, there was nothing particularly remarkable about the Inklings — at least, not within the context of the academic milieu to which they belonged. The Oxford of that period was positively infested with similar unofficial associations: cliquish little in-groups of dons and/or undergraduates, who met to talk, drink, politick, bolster each other's egos, and above all engage in a constantly reassuring fluster of social or pseudo-social intercourse, often but not invariably intellectual in focus.

What distinguished the Inklings from such lesser coteries was the sheer quality of their central trinity of regulars. First and foremost, of course, there was C. S. Lewis himself — "Jack", his friends invariably called him. He was not merely a great scholar and a great story-teller but a great personality too, somewhat reminiscent of the mighty Dr. Samuel Johnson in both the range and the roundness of his prejudices and his pronouncements, but set off from him by a distinct lack of pomposity and a charmingly quicksilver quality of warmly unassuming humanity.

Then there was his beloved brother "Warnie," an earthier and less intellectual type who nevertheless ultimately rose to literary prominence in his own right as W. H. Lewis, that urbanely eloquent chronicler and interpreter of 17th century French culture and history. And thirdly came J. R. R. Tolkien, an eminent myth-maker who certainly requires no introduction in an era overshadowed by his fabled Middle-Earth.

Charles Williams in 1935

J.R.R. Tolkien, circa 1935

At the beginning of the Second World War, this remarkable threesome was augmented by the fortuitous arrival of Charles Williams — poet, literateur, and creator of seven striking theological thrillers which have won him a small but enthusiastic band of readers who consider him fully the equal of Tolkien and Lewis in both depth and power of mythopoeic imagination. In many ways, his was an even more striking personality than Lewis'. "He seemed to me," remarked his distinguished admirer T. S. Eliot, "to approximate, more nearly than any man I have known familiarly, to the saint." He was, in addition, a leading authority on witchcraft and black magic, perennially fascinated by all aspects of the occult.

These four were the quintessential Inklings, though the group at one time or another numbered several other distinguished figures in its fold — notably Hugo Dyson (who along with Tolkien and the two Lewises could lay legitimate claim to being a "charter member"), Owen Barfield, Nevill Coghill, Lord David Cecil, and (somewhat incongruously) the left-wing novelist and poet, John Wain. But to the end C. S. Lewis remained not just the group's "onlie begetter" but its abiding spiritual centre, and from the beginning it was dominated by Lewis' personality and preferences, by his ideals and above all by his numerous enthusiasms.

So it was inevitable that Humphrey Carpenter's admirable group-portrait, The Inklings, should turn out to be essentially a biography of Lewis himself — amplified, to be sure, by an extended detour into the entrancing personality of Charles Williams, for whom Lewis seems to have achieved a closer personal attachment than he did for any other merely human being apart from his brother and his wife of many years later.

As for Tolkien, Carpenter has already treated him at length in his best-selling authorized biography, and wisely avoids repeating himself here. The two books, indeed, complement each other like wafer and wine, making a splendid pair of companion-volumes for the discerning reader's shelf — as they were undoubtedly intended to do. And some readers of the earlier biography may be relieved to discover that, freed of the wearisome necessity of confining his attentions to the almost stultifying uneventfulness of the last half-century of Tolkien's life, Carpenter succeeds in making this second volume much the livelier and more stimulating of the two.

C. S. (Jack) Lewis and brother Warnie on holiday in 1949

In addition, his treatment of Lewis himself is far more illuminating and insightful than that which the informative but unrelentingly hagiographic official biography by Roger Lancelyn Green and Walter Hooper has to offer. Only when it comes to Lewis' early life do Green and Hooper have the edge.

Of necessity, Carpenter skims all too briefly over the pre-Inklings years — which in any case Lewis himself has treated brilliantly in his own spiritual autobiography, Surprised by Joy. To all intents and purposes he is content to pick up the story in 1926, a lean year for the newly-appointed young Oxford don who, hungry for congenial companionship, was soon moved to commit to paper the heartfelt plaint: "Oh for the people who speak one's own language!"

The answer to that cry, in the event, turned out to be the Inklings — a brotherhood of fellow-spirits all of whom spoke Lewis' language, more or less. For the bond which held them together, apart from simple friendship, was the discomforting fact that all of them were in modern terms anachronisms — not 20th-century men at all, but spiritual exiles from the far side of that momentous "great divide," as Lewis called it, which sunders the traditional Christian society of the European past from the mechanized post-Christian madhouse of our own era.

The Inklings' common tongue was the stuff and substance of that traditional "Old Western Culture" which, in Lewis' view, had passed into eclipse somewhere amidst the apocalyptic turbulence of the 19th century. And to a greater or lesser degree all of them were at odds with the fashionable flow and counter-flow of their own times — the queasy ideologism of the 1930's, the glib patriotism of the war years, the drably demagogic sea-drift into democratic socialism that overtook once-merry England in the post-war period.

It was precisely this sense of deep-down alienation that turned the three ablest among them — Lewis, Tolkien, Williams — into myth-makers and self-consciously muscular reaffirmers of traditional theologies. Blending solid scholarship with semi-prophetic imaginings, they were driven to re-create, on paper at least, the older and richer world they saw withering all around them, the fabulous past in which their spirits felt truly at home.

But just what, precisely, was actually said at those fabulous gatherings? Alas, since the Inklings were never anything more than an informal fellowship of like-minded friends, no formal minutes were ever kept at their meetings — nor were there any would-be Boswells present, jotting down voluminous notes for the benefit of posterity. And so we shall never really know.

To be sure, from our retrospective familiarity with the life and writings of individual participants, we can surmise at least something of the general drift of their discussions and the kind of things that each one might have said — as, indeed, Carpenter himself attempts to do in the imaginative reconstruction of a fictitious Inklings meeting that serves as the centrepiece of the present volume. It is a brave attempt; but, inevitably, it fails.

Thus, in the end, one is left only with a haunting sense of the personalities involved, not of the legendary dialogues in which they engaged. The voices have faded; the conversation is silenced forever.

Yet it was excellent conversation — of that we may be sure, even if its substance continues to elude us. As to its quality, we at least possess the retrospective testimony of one reasonably objective ear-witness, the novelist John Wain, who has said of the Inklings meetings that he himself attended: "The best of them were as good as anything I shall live to see."

After finishing Humphrey Carpenter's evocative tribute, one can well believe it.

Question: When is a novel not a novel? Answer: When it's a collection of inter-related short stories by Alice Munro.

Munro's new book is titled Who Do you Think You Are? Eight of the 10 stories it contains have been published before, in magazines like Ms., Weekend, Redbook, and The New Yorker. Grouped together, they resound against one another like wooden wind chimes — subtly, harmoniously, and pitched in a key all their own.

Who Do You Think You Are? tells, in thoughtfully selected instalments, the story of a young girl growing into adolescence, adulthood and middle age. Rose's story begins in Hanratty, the small Ontario town where she was born, and takes her to a western Ontario university, a Vancouver suburb, a Kootenay cul-de-sac and country life north of Kingston. It ends with a final visit to Hanratty, where she discovers some truths about herself which she'd been unable to learn anywhere else.

As Munro tells it, Rose's journey into self-discovery is no picaresque hunt for the bluebird which waits in her own back yard. It's more of a search for a place where she can unload the albatross she's been carrying around with her for 30-odd years.

Rose's albatross is Shame. As a child, she is shamed by her capitulation after family fights. As an adolescent, she is shamed by her own pretensions at high school and her reaction to a stranger who molests her on a train. Because, as an adult, she is ashamed of her behavior to a man who thinks he loves her, she marries him. She attempts an affair, and is ashamed by failure. When she leaves her husband to become an actress (a fitting career for anyone as good at masking her true feelings as Rose), she is continually ashamed at what she believes to be her own inadequacy.

Then, in Hanratty, she renews her friendship with that L. M. Montgomery used to call a "kindred spirit"; He is Ralph Gillespie, a former classmate. ("There was the same silent joke, the same conspiracy, comfort; the same, the same.") Because Ralph shares her feelings about so many things, Rose realizes that they must, indeed, be valid, and her burden of shame is eased at last.

This victory is larger than it sounds, because Munro has left us in no doubt that Rose's Hanratty upbringing had a brutalizing influence which she has spent her life attempting to subdue. She works so hard at it, in fact, that eventually she is able to pass as middle class in any group and make conversational mileage out of her hair-raising childhood memories at the same time.

Rose's other problem is Men. This one she never does quite manage to solve, though she comes close at least once. At the bottom of her dissatisfaction and failure is the hard fact that none of her men can stand to be told the bare truth as Rose sees it. Restraint, evasion, or an outright lie is invariably necessary.

With Ralph Gillespie, however, it is safe to be herself. Why Rose does not recognize the superior quality of such a "kindred spirit" relationship at the beginning, and thus save herself 20 years of frustration and grief, Munro neglects to explain. This is a weakness in the book, which I do not recommend to readers who are easily upset by characters who suffer from the stupidity problem.

On the other hand, Who Do You Think You Are? contains some brilliant touches that will tempt appreciative readers back to it again and again, searching for more. (As one of Munro's great strengths is the subtlety of her imagination, they are likely to find them.) Two examples:

Rose, fresh from college, is attempting to put down her incorrigible stepmother, Flo: "This would have to be the last part of town where they put the sewers, Flo said. 'Of course,' Rose said coolly. 'This is the working-class part of town.' 'Working class?' said Flo. 'Not if the ones around here can help it.' "

"Jocelyn said . . . she found it so interesting to talk to Rose (because) Rose had ideas but was uneducated. Rose was surprised at this and mentioned the college she had attended in western Ontario. Then she saw . . . that that was exactly what Jocelyn meant."

Alice Munro works on a small canvas but, like Jane Austen, she knows how to make small into big. Who Do You Think You Are? belongs with the best of fiction because it repays the reader's time, with interest.

Durrell Weaves New Thread in Pattern

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Livia is the second in Lawrence Durrell's planned sequence of five interconnecting novels. While the new book is not, in a strict sense, a sequel to the first in that series, its opening chapter will certainly seem less opaque to anyone who has already read Monsieur.

The novels are to be set "in quincunex": five objects positioned in the shape of a rectangle with one placed at each corner and one in the middle. Although it is not yet clear which of these novels will lie at the centre of that pattern, the relationship between the first two shows Durrell's characteristic preoccupation with reflecting points of view.

Sutcliffe, the writer of the first novel, now turns out to be the imagined persona of Blanford, the narrator in this second novel, and Pia, whose love Sutcliffe once frustratedly pursued, is, in fact, a composite portrait of two sisters, Livia and Constance, who have haunted Blanford's own life. To put it more simply, the characters who seemed "real" in the first novel are now seen to be imagined projections of an actual relationship which is described in this second novel.

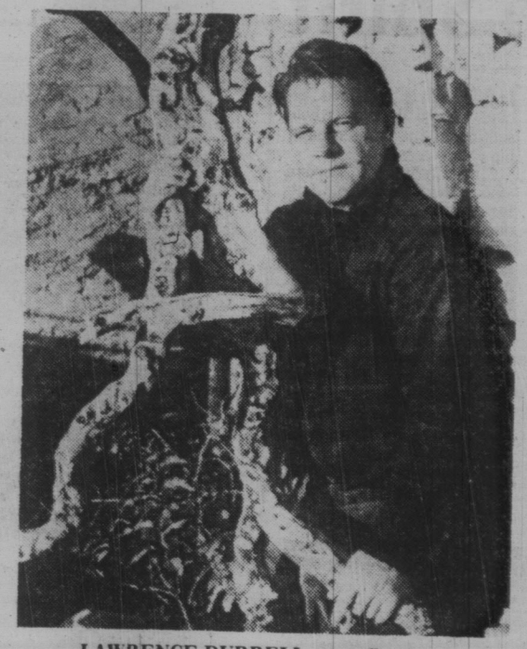
Lest this seem overingenious and off-putting, I should make it clear that Livia does stand securely on its own and has a number of independent beauties that will reward those who are prepared to negotiate the rocks of that opening chapter.

The frustrating thing about all Durrell's books is their surface barrier of private symbol and word-play. With an irony that is presumably intentional, he has Blanford muse about the writer's difficult task of communicating his personal vision in terms which can be understood by a wide audience:

"The consolations of art are precious few. He always had a sneaking fear that what he wrote was too private to reach a reader. Stilted and stunted, the modern product . . . a private prose and verse typical of the modern sphincterine artist."

The quotation illustrates the sphinctre of Durrell's own prose and sphinx-like pose. Those readers who expect a fiction to unravel clearly with a minimum of delay should steer away from the novel. While I myself admit to a certain irritation with the way Durrell draws, ever-tightening circles around his central drama, I find that, if one is prepared to follow him along the spirals, there are always astonishing things dotted along the edges of that twisting way.

Whether the actual journey through the quincunex will finally have been worthwhile can, of course, only be judged once all five novels have been completed. My own partial verdict on a work-in-progress is that it is typically Durrell: difficult to penetrate, evocative, annoyingly inward-looking, and disturbingly beautiful.



LAWRENCE DURRELL . . . reflections

Durrell has an unerring gift for recreating a sense-of-place. In Livia, Avignon and its vineyards are as much the central "character" as pre-war Alexandria was in the splendid Alexandria Quartet. The novel opens as Blanford puts down the phone after hearing that Constance is dead. He sits at his writing desk in her house in England, surrounded by her possessions, and is triggered back to his memories of a summer in the mid-1930's which he and his Oxford friends spent together, restoring the tumbledown villa, Tu Duc, that Constance had just inherited from her aunt.

As Blanford's mind struggles through the detritus of his life back to those former days in Provence, he engages in "conversation" with the fictive Sutcliffe, whose suicide had been described in Monsieur but who is still as alive as he ever was in the writer's imagination. Slowly the mists part. We are taken beyond Sutcliffe's version to Blanford's own portrait of an oddly assorted group of friends as they journey by barge down the Rhone to Avignon, rooted in the Roman past and the worldly splendors and policies of its medieval popes. Its sunlit colors and its mystery by moonlight make this the perfect setting for the sexual ambiguities that bind the travellers together.

Durrell makes us conscious of a lost world. Avignon with its Provencal gaiety and its squalid gypsy quarter belongs to a particular point in time. The rumblings from Nazi Germany must inevitably mean the end of a way of life; the golden colors of summer are tinged by our awareness of its fragility.

That sense of transience and regret is reflected on to the uneasy relationships between the people who move across that landscape. Even as they experience its magic, they sense the dissolution that will come:

"It was like a dream — the wet stone heads of the sisters, like statues come to life; the dense packages of silence moving about the garden suddenly drilled by a short burst of birdsong. 'Perils and absences sharpen desire,' says the ancient Greek poet. In all the richness of this perfect summer Blanford felt the pang of partings to come — vertigo of a desire which must for the time being rest unrequited."

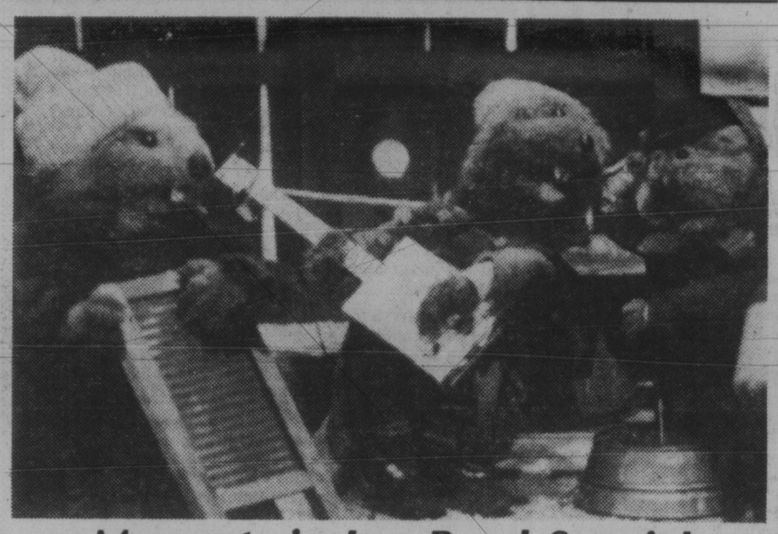
This marriage between the scenery and the characters is splendidly managed. And within that evocative atmosphere, Durrell parades a number of exotic personalities: Livia herself, Prince Hassad, an Egyptian diplomat, and Lord Galen, "extremely discrete, extremely ambiguous" with his strange menage. They provide some magnificent set-pieces in which Durrell gives free rein to his levantine preoccupation with political intrigue and sexual perversity. The narrow ill-lit alleys of the city and the ancient majesty of the Pont du Gard shed an ironic gleam over these magnificently inflated desires.

At the centre of all this we see Blanford's hypnotized love for Livia, whom he will marry and who will bury him alive. And that brings me back to the annoyingly private quality at the heart of Durrell's books. Livia is yet another of his unreachable women, with unconquerable yearnings and peculiarly dark sex lives, who drive their men to perdition.

Livia is so enigmatic, so wayward and so cold that it is hard for the reader to participate in Blanford's entrapment. The writer's own analysis of love is colored by the fact that it has since destroyed him; we cannot therefore experience his innocent delusion, and so he appears a hopeless fool.

Durrell's method invites us to stand objectively aside to view the cruel comedy of love; we see through Livia's charms. And yet we are also invited to take on trust the fact that Livia, despite her warped personality, was irresistible. And there yawns the gap between a writer's private imagination and the reader's own perceptions. Perhaps the other three books will successfully bridge it.

LIVIA OR BURIED ALIVE, by Lawrence Durrell. Oxford. $12.95.



Muppets in Jug-Band Special

An hour-long treat on Christmas Eve for the entire family is offered on CBC-TV Sunday, Dec. 24 at 8 p.m., when Jim Henson's Muppets gather together with music and lyrics by Paul Williams for a musical program called Emmet Otter's Jug-Band Christmas. With Kermit the Frog as host, it is the story of how poor Emmet Otter, an odd-job man, and his washer-woman mother, strive to buy each other gifts at Christmas.

Ballet from London

The Sleeping Beauty ballet with music by Peter Tchaikovsky will be performed by the Royal Ballet in a special telecast from Covent Garden, London, from 7:00-9:45 PM, Saturday, Dec. 23, on KVOS-TV, 12.

Performed to some of the most beautiful music Tchaikovsky ever composed, The Sleeping Beauty is a genuine gem of choreography that was first performed in January 1890 at the Maryinsky Theatre, St. Petersburg. The Royal Ballet gave its first performance of the work at Sadler's Wells Theatre in February 1939.

Host and commentator for the ballet will be Mikhail Baryshnikov, whom critics today compare with the great Nijinsky.

Performing as Princess Aurora will be Merle Park, a native of Salisbury, Rhodesia, who has been a member of The Royal Ballet since 1954 and one of its principal dancers since 1962. She has danced frequently with Rudolf Nureyev and in 1975 appeared with him in "Nureyev and Friends" for a six-week Broadway season, the first time that a full evening of ballet had been given on Broadway in New York City. Prince Florimund will be performed by David Wall, a Londoner who joined the Royal Ballet School at the age of ten and is one of the outstanding dancers in the world.

Monica Mason will perform the role of Fairy Carabosse and two Canadian performers, Wayne Eagling and Jennifer Penney will be seen as the Bluebirds.

Penney was born in Vancouver and studied ballet in Kelowna with Gweneth Lloyd and Bettey Farally (founders of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet) before going to England in 1962.

Hugo's Les Miserables

Triumph of the Spirit

By JOAN GEOGHEGAN

On Wednesday, Dec. 27, at 8 p.m. CBS airs a three-hour version of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." The classic novel is produced for television with Richard Jordan as the unjustly imprisoned Jean Valjean and Tony Perkins as his dogged pursuer, Inspector Javert.

Jordan opens the film as a young man who steals a loaf of bread to feed his sister's starving children. He's sentenced to 19 years in prison, escapes, then spends another 20 to 30 years dodging Javert.

By the end of the film, Jordan's normally thick, brown hair has grayed his tall frame stoops, and there's a slight waver to his voice.

Jordan insists the different ages were not difficult to act out. Rather, his most trying portrayal is of the wild, embittered Jean Valjean with the saintly bishop (Claude Dauphin).

"That moment of redemption was the reason I wanted to play the part," he says. "I loved working with Claude Dauphin." And he describes the French actor as being as saintly as his role.

In addition to being a literary classic, "Les Miserables" is also an adventure story.

Jordan's character, Jean Valjean, is as strong as a bull. He lifts boulders and wood carts off injured men. He scales convent walls to escape the police. He wades through the sewers of Paris with his ward's lover on his back.

"I did some of the escape stuff," Jordan explains, "and I did all the stuff in the sewers. In prison, the leg and neck irons were real, you had to be careful with fast movements or they'd tear your skin . . . very unpleasant."

He adds that the rats in the prison were real, then laughs and says, "I don't know why I'm an actor. I get myself in some very unpleasant situations."

In the sewer scene, he explains, "The sewers weren't real, but the water was ice-cold. I actually carried Christopher Guard." He didn't mind carrying Guard because "I'm a pretty good-sized character." The hard scene was getting him down the hole into the sewer."

Although CBS stuck as close as they could to Hugo's novel, they did "leave out a couple of subplots." Jordan says, "A lot of the dialogue in the movie is spare because Hugo devoted whole sections to the motivation of his characters.

"If anything," Jordan says, "the CBS version suffers from not being long enough. It should have been a miniseries. I think it's a good enough story. It would have been better in six-hours."

A classical stage actor by training, this was Jordan's first time out with actors Perkins, John Gielgud and Cyril Cusack.

He says, "I'm proudest of the moment at the end with the old guy (Gielgud). We're contemporaries. You can't do age just by make-up. You have to feel it."

Of his overall performance in "Les Miserables," Jordan is still waiting for a verdict.
